200,000 Facing Hunger as Relief In Illinois Ends

Needy in Cook County Left Without Money, Food in Crisis.

List of Destitute In State Mounts

Measure to Raise Share for U. S. Grants Up in Legislature.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 5. — The stark spectacle of more than 200,000 persons without food or money to pay rent and buy clothes faced Cook County today.

Tragic possibilities in the crisis were heightened by the situation of additional thousands down-State who were being turned away from relief stations in 83 counties because the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission is without further funds.

In Cook County the pinch appeared when emergency measures taken April 26 and expected to hold hunger and exposure at bay until at least the middle of May were exhausted in a little more than one week. Work relief checks which were the sole resource of 50,622 family heads have been halted and none can be sent, on the present state of the commission's exchequer, after tomorrow.

Lists grow Daily.

To top that, 4,000 more families will join those without any relief each day until additional funds are supplied, Wilfred S. Reynolds, commission secretary said. These families are part of those who received the last of Cook County's grocery orders.

In the other counties of Illinois, the needs of the 1,200,000 clients of the IERC were in various conditions of stalemate. Some counties were completely without funds, others said private sources were helping some, while another and smaller group reported that relief was being continued on a curtailed scale.

At Springfield officials saw possibility of demonstrations Tuesday, when the Legislature again will consider the addition of the "third penny" to the State's "take" from each dollar of sales transactions. This measure has been asked by Gov. Henry Horner to provide State funds which the Federal Government says Illinois must use to match further Federal donations.

No disorders have been reported yet, though a small group of unemployed marched yesterday in Springfield, carrying banners demanding that relief stations be kept open.

Little Left for May.

The State relief commission reported it had only $175,000 for May needs, with estimated requirements for the month of $13,000,000.

While families which received their last orders a week ago will have empty pantries tomorrow, various makeshifts were employed to ease the situation over the State. Peoria County, in which only food and milk have been distributed for a week to the neediest, transferred 600 aged clients to township rolls. Others made similar shifts. Three additional counties tonight join the 83 which previously ended all relief work. About 143,000 families were cared for in the down-State counties, which now have used up their resources.

Representative Elmer J. Schackenburg, Chicago Republican, who was a leader in the Assembly fight against additional tax program, said events of the past few days had

23 Seized as Turkey Nips Revolution Plot

By the Associated Press.

Ankara, Turkey, May 5.—A revolutionary plot designed under cover of religion to overthrow Turkey's republican regime and kill Kemalist leaders, was discovered today by authorities at Sparta.

The organization was headed by Kurd Sheikh Uzzeman Saidi, who had been deported for participation in a revolt in 1929. Police said 23 conspirators were arrested.

Hoover Likens The New Deal To Human Zoo

Tells Social Conference 'Our People Won't Be Labeled' for Cages.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, May 5.—Former President Herbert Hoover declared here tonight that economic and social security should not be attained through regimentation of "the mental and spiritual health of our people."

"You may produce," said Mr. Hoover, "an efficient economic or governmental unit by a manufactured, regimented, imposed environment, but you will not produce a free individual, free to change * * * his own environment * * *. In short, you will not produce an American.

"As a matter of economic security alone, we can find it in our jails. The slaves had it.

Thinks In Terms of Zoo.

"Our people are not ready to be turned into a national zoo," the former Chief Executive continued, "our citizens classified, labeled and directed by a form of self-approved keepers."

Mr. Hoover was addressing the California Conference of Social Work, a gathering of leaders in various fields of sociological endeavor.

He said the people must be taught to "cling to their family life, to their homes, to their individual self-respect, to their rights, to their individual liberties."

"They must be taught not to change their souls and spirits for the fallacious promises of material comforts. It is the unfailing record of mankind that in such an exchange the individual finds himself robbed of all that he had, both spiritually and materially."

Reiterating his belief in social service and private charity, Mr. Hoover said if the Government became the source of all major effort in that direction, "then one of the most fundamental of inspirations to the spiritual growth of the family or individual will have been destroyed."

Other Aims Than Security.

"There is far more than economic security needed," he said, "if civilization is to march forward to social security. Social workers are not needed merely to feed, clothe and house the unemployed and the unemployable either in these abnormal periods or in periods of less economic tension.

"We could do that by the simple methods of bread lines, barracks and dungarees."

Mr. Hoover praised the general body of American social workers for their "outstanding" work in research, housing and other fields, and remarked:

"We need constant and persistent research and survey, and I would indeed suggest that we also need an institution for guiding foolish persons who are loose on the landscape with only part of the facts and imbued with a great emotion."

Death-Seeker Dives Into Post

Batters Head Upon Steel Pillar at D. C. Station in Suicide Try.

After running across the length of the Union Station waiting room, Paul S. Weaver, 42, of New York City, leaped head first yesterday into a steel pillar in a futile effort to commit suicide. Subdued by three policemen, he was taken to Gallinger Hospital, still conscious, where he was held for mental observation and treatment for scalp lacerations.

Weaver was first observed by persons waiting in the room. He was wondering about aimlessly. Suddenly, witnesses said, he began running swiftly across the room. As he neared the taxicab entrance he leaped into the air, jamming his head against the upright pillar.

The shock stunned him, witnesses said. But before aid reached him he had begun beating his head on the ground, screaming, "Let me alone. I want to die."

Spectators and station police carried him to a bench in a nearby room. He still was struggling. Three patrolmen had to tie him to a stretcher before they could carry him to an ambulance.

At Gallinger he refused to explain his act. He said his father was the Rev. S. T. Wheeler, of Edwardsville, Ill.

New SEC Rules Aim to Control 'Counter' Sales

Step Taken on Trading in Securities Outside Stock Exchanges.

Initial steps to bring the widespread "over-the-counter" security business under Federal control were taken by the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday when that agency promulgated preliminary regulations to govern that type of trading.

The new regulations make it unlawful for any broker or dealer to engage in "over-the-counter" transactions without registering with the SEC on a form which will be prescribed May 15. Brokers or dealers who have been convicted within the last ten years of any crime in connection with the sale of securities will be denied the right to register.

The new regulations also prescribed a series of fair-trade practices for "over-the-counter" brokers and dealers, designed to protect the public. Under these rules, a broker or dealer would be forbidden to represent both buyer and seller in the same transaction, unless both parties had knowledge of such fact.

Difficult Task.

The SEC estimates that from 14,000 to 20,000 brokers and dealers engage in "over-the-counter transactions; that is, transactions in securities which do not take place on a registered stock exchange.

Regulation of the "over-the-counter" business is one of the most difficult tasks before the SEC, and that commission has devoted months of study to the problem. Even now the SEC is cautiously picking its way, confining its first regulations to a minimum, which will be effective only for one year. As "over-the-counter" brokers and dealers register, supplying the SEC with data about their business, further regulations may be found necessary.

Eventually the SEC may undertake the regulation of this kind of security trading by obtaining jurisdiction over the investment bankers' code. The fair trade practices set up in the new regulations are similar to fair trade practices contained in that code.

The regulations for "over-the-counter" trading apply to any broker engaged in security transactions outside of an exchange, with certain exceptions. Brokers who execute orders solely on registered exchanges are not subject to the rules. But members of exchanges

50,000 Reds Jeer in Protest At King's Jubilee Festival

Communists Hurl Taunts in Mile-Long Parade Through Packed London Streets; Foes Fail to Halt Laborite's Speech.

By the United Press.

London, May 5.—The loyalty and affection with which King George V's many millions of subjects regard him was apparent tonight, on the eve of the monarch's silver jubilee celebrations starting tomorrow, although Communists staged a huge anti-jubilee demonstration.

Loyal subjects packed every hotel, inn and lodging house in the ruler's capital to pay tribute to the King in the greatest pageant of humanity in Great Britain's modern history.

The celebrations, with state banquets, court balls, state drives and reviews of the empire's armed forces, will continue until August. The royal family, particularly King George and Queen Mary, is faced with the heaviest list of public engagements it has ever known.

"Down With Ballyhoo."

The discordant note occurred when 50,000 persons in a mile-long parade marched through the dense crowds of jubilee sight-seers this afternoon shouting:

"Down with the jubilee ballyhoo."

They waved red flags as they marched along, singing the Communist internationale and shaking fists at the gay festoons along the avenues, part of the decorations making the celebration of the King's twenty-fifth anniversary on the throne.

The anti-jubilee throng marched to Hyde Park for a second May Day celebration under the auspices officially of the London Labor Party. Hecklers attempted to shout down the chief speaker, Herbert Morrison, leader of the London party, but later he was nearly mobbed by laborite admirers seeking to shake his hand.

Cordons of foot and mounted police kept order at the demonstration, which dispersed after two hours of speeches.

The official silver jubilee celebrations officially open tomorrow with a special thanksgiving service in St. Paul's Cathedral. There will be

Peek Opposes Hull's Theory Of U. S. Trade

President Told Increase of Imports Unnecessary to Boost Sales.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

George N. Peek, the President's special adviser on foreign trade, yesterday brought into the open his fight with the State Department by publishing figures tending to show that undue importance has been placed on admitting imports as the means to increase American trade with the world.

This is the basic principle upon which the State Department has been negotiating trade agreements with foreign nations. It is the theory, long accepted as an Administration policy, that other countries can buy from us only in proportion to what we are willing to buy from them, taken in the aggregate.

With all this, however, Peek now takes issue by presenting complicated figures to show that foreign countries last year used far more dollar exchange to buy American securities than they did to purchase goods or services. Thus, he argues that the necessity of admitting more imports is "not apparent," unless payments are made on the war debts.

$970,000,000 Loss Seen.

The Peek figures are contained in a letter to the President, released with his approval, on the "foreign trade and international investment position" of the United States. They set out that, while this country continued to maintain its favorable balance of trade, it suffered a "capital loss" of $970,000,000 because of the transfer of assets in that amount.

Under-surface differences between Peek and State Department experts handling the foreign trade program have been apparent for a long time. One instance was rejection by the Department of a cotton barter deal with Germany, proposed by Peek. In this case, President Roosevelt upheld the Department.

That Peek does not propose to take this lying down is apparent from his present report, which proposes: (1) That a detailed study be made of American investments abroad and foreigners' holdings in this country, and (2) "a review of all National policies based in whole or in part upon our international creditor status."

This second proposal was taken as a direct challenge to the trade pact program of Secretary Cordell

Election Odds Favor Jackson Against Baltimore Feudists

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, May 5.—Mayor Howard W. Jackson is generally expected to be re-elected Tuesday to administer the affairs of this city for another four years. But opinions differ as to the size of his majority.

Mr. Jackson's re-election is expected despite the fact that a sizable number of Democrats will bolt their party and vote for the Republican candidate, Blanchard Randall, jr., because of resentment toward Mr. Jackson for his alleged lack of enthusiasm for the candidacy of former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie last fall.

Even some Democrats who make no secret of the fact that they will vote for the Republican candidate concede that the number of bolters will not be sufficient to defeat Mr. Jackson. But they contend they will keep down his majority to such a level that he will be at a disadvantage in 1938 in demanding recognition as a contender for the party's gubernatorial nomination.

Mr. Jackson's friends, however, contend that defections from the Democratic Party will be confined to Ritchie "soreheads"—plus some Curran-Ennis "soreheads" and will be more than made up by defections from the Republican Party. They predict the Mayor's matjority will exceed that of 63,000 given him four years ago.

Be all that as it may, Mayor Jackson's re-election looks certain and if he is defeated some of his opponents will be the most surprised of all persons in Baltimore. This conclusion is based on several factors. One is that Mayor Jackson, for the first time in his career, faced a sharp primary fight. Many of the ward and precinct leaders who have been known as Ritchie adherents were opposed to him. Nevertheless he defeated his chal-

Wanted! Wives for Farmers! Reich Appeals for 330,000

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 5.—Announcement that 333,000 women between the ages of 16 and 33 are needed on farms immediately to become mates to "healthy, virile, hereditary" farmers was made today by Germany's Estate of Nutrition, matchmaker extraordinary.

The lack of women was caused years ago when women deserted the farms because of the shortage of dwellings, the announcement said. This shortage now is rapidly being overcome by a government appropriation of 250,000,000 marks (about $100,000,000) for farm homes.

By ordering girls back to the soil instead of back to the kitchen, Nazi leaders are trying to assume the role of matchmakers for 8,000,000 unmarried women.

The movement is grounded in carefully computed statistics that there are 1,800,000 more women than men in Germany; that 8,000,000 of 33,500,000 females are single, and that there are only 862 women to 1,000 men in farming districts, compared to 999 women between 16 and 33 years to 1,000 men of these ages in the cities.

This disparity, statisticians say, accounts for the large number of unmarried women. They argue that by closing the gap and sending marriageable girls to places where the most unmarried men live, Nazidom can better fulfill its aims for a bigger population.

And no Nazi leader will deny that the population policy of the third Reich is one of its two or three major principles—the others being military equality and economic self-sufficiency.

Roosevelt Defeat In Vote on Bonus Looms in Senate

Mrs. Bergdoll Asks Roosevelt Interview

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 5.—The wife of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll today wrote a letter to President Roosevelt requesting an interview.

Mrs. Bergdoll, who came here from Germany last week, hopes the President will grant a pardon to her husband, World War draft dodger.

The wife's letter asked an interview some time this week.

Stay Refused, Killer of Girl Waits to Die

'American Tragedy' Slayer of Swetheart Alone in Death House.

By the Associated Press.

Rockview Penitentiary, Bellefonte, Pa., May 5.—Bobby Edwards, white-faced boy from the hard coal fields, watched the mists grow black over Nittany Mountain tonight and prepared to die in a few hours in the electric chair.

The "American Tragedy" slayer of Freda McKechnie, little church worker who stood between him and another girl, bade a tearless farewell to his father just before dusk shrowded the rainswept prison walls.

As they clasped hands, death house officials announced "everything is in readiness" for the execution at 12:30 (Eastern standard time) tomorrow morning.

Gov. George H. Earle, at Harrisburg, and prison officials, received a deluge of telegrams and letters pleading that Edwards be granted a stay but the Governor steadfastly refused to intervene.

With the death hour drawing near, the Governor sent the following message to the parents of the condemned man:

Mother Wires Earle.

"I have most carefully weighed the last-minute pleas of the parents of Allen Edwards and friends of the family as well as other persons and I have decided that I shall take no action. I have the most heartfelt sympathy for the parents of this boy but I have been given no good reason to interfere with the course of justice."

Sometime before Mrs. Edwards had wired the Governor:

"May I ask your mercy for Robert? Please."

It was signed "His Mother."

After leaving his son, Daniel J. Edwards, paymaster for one of the big mine colleries, declined to answer any questions.

The Rev. Thomas Hughes, a Wilkes-Barre Baptist minister, also visited Edwards and said he will remain to the end.

Edwards wrote more letters today and read a variety of communications sent him by friends and distant relatives. He traced the maps of a geographical magazine and smoked numerous cigarettes.

He dozed and often looked through the high-barred window of the death house, far out on the rolling hills. He remarked about the rainy weather.

Burial Near Victim.

Edwards' body will be claimed by his family immediately after the execution. Burial will be in Edwardsville, overlooking the colleries, where Freda lies.

Edwards and his father discussed "things at home" and the aged mine official urged his son to keep up his courage.

"Don't worry, I will," Bobby replied with a smile.

Prison officials explained that Edwards ate a hearty meal at noon. He had pork steak, potatoes, green beans, bread, head lettuce and coffee.

His evening meal consisted of cold cuts, rolls, a pudding and tea.

Administration Chiefs Fear Compromise Bill Is Doomed.

Coughlin Appeals For Patman's Bill

Long and Left-Wingers Back Vinson Plan; Test Is Near.

Leaders in the fight for prepayment of the soldiers' bonus were hopeful last night, after years of bitter controversy, that enough strength will be mustered in the Senate this week to enact a bonus measure by a margin sufficient to override a veto by President Roosevelt.

When debate is resumed in the Senate this afternoon the choice will lie between the $2,283,545,000 Vinson cash payment bill and the inflationary Patman proposal, since the Harrison "compromise" plan apparently is doomed.

It is claimed by Administration leaders that President Roosevelt would sign the Harrison bill, if passed, but no other.

Prospects were a final vote will be reached either tomorrow or Wednesday. If the Senate bonus forces can rally a two-thirds majority, enough to override a veto, it will be the second major defeat of the session for the President.

Vinson Bill in Lead.

Earlier this year, the Senate rejected United States adherence to the World Court. The President won his long-fought battle for a $4,880,000,000 works relief fund, however, which makes the score thus far even, 1 and 1.

In spite of week-end efforts to find support for the $1,199,000,000 "compromise" offered by Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Finance Committee, the Vinson plan for the payment of the bonus was believed to retain the lead.

Sponsors of this plan, led by Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, are confident that if they put through this measure the House can be enticed away from the Patman bill, which it approved by only a three-vote margin.

Even as the way was being cleared for huge, new Governmental expenditures by advance payment of the bonus, conservative Democrats were planning to get behind a resolution to be introduced today by Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, which would restrict appropriations to incoming revenue.

Because the Vinson bonus plan is held to be less objectionable to the White House than the Patman "greenback" proposal, some Administration supporters said if the Harrison "compromise" is defeated they will switch to the Patman bill. This would make sure of a White House veto which leaders believe would be sustained.

Senator Harrison has declared that his measure is the only bonus legislation that Mr. Roosevelt will sign. The White House, however, has been careful to avoid any recent commitment.

AAA, TVA Coming Up.

The House, meantime, will begin the week by considering minor measures, waiting until Wednesday to resume discussion of the Eccles banking bill. Hearings on this controversial measure will be continued today by the Senate sub-committee headed by Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia.

With the bonus out of the way by the middle of the week the Senate is expected to take up either the Norris bill to strengthen the TVA, or amendments to the AAA. The Harison bill to extend the NRA is ready, but a movement is under way to hold back NRA legislation until after the Supreme Court has had a chance to act in the current poultry case.

The Administration social security bill, already passed by the House, is to be taken up by the Senate Finance Committee, but this measure is not expected to reach the Senate for some time. The House Ways and Means Committee also will make a start today on tax legislation to re-enact or replace the so-called "nuisance taxes."

In the face of a "must" program of no less than half a dozen highly controversial measures, Capitol leaders were resigned to spending most of the summer in Washington. In reply to requests that he shelve part of his program, the President is reported to have remarked that he is content for Congress to stay here all summer.

Robot Plane to Soar Over D. C. Seeking 17 Altitude Records

The robot controlled "mystery" airplane that sped across the continent last Tuesday in 11 hours and 5 minutes will race over Washington this week in a series of high altitude speed flights in search of new world's records.

D. W. "Tommy Tomlinson, veteran flier, will be in charge of the big twin-engined Douglas plane as it flies over a course between New York, Washington and Norfolk, Va. The former Navy and acrobatic pilot now is assistant to the president of Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., owners of the transport to be used in the speed flights.

Washingtonians may hear the big plane as it goes over the city, but it is doubtful if they will see it. Tomlinson will fly at 14,000 feet during the tests in order to obtain greater flying speed in the somewhat rarer atmosphere. National Aeronautic Association officials and timers here will check him with a radio-controlled theodolyte as he passes over the course. He will not land here.

In all, Tomlinson will try for 8 international and 11 national marks. He will seek to hang up new figures over the 1,000 kilometer course carrying pay loads of 2,200 pounds for a distance of 3,100 miles and pay loads of 4,400 pounds for a distance of 1,200 miles. The other marks are in similar pay load and distance classes. These marks now are held by France and Spain. If he is successful, American planes will hold 38 world's records compared to the 40 which are held by France.

The "mystery" ship is similar to

Between You and Me

Father Roosevelt's Son Jimmie; Anent the Chamber Row; What Is Inflation?

By Raymond Clapper

FATHER ROOSEVELT needs Son James at the White House to handle a combination of chores formerly attended to by Intimate Family Friend Louis Howe, who is ill, and by Daughter Anna, who moved to New York after her marriage.

Some of the chores are political, some are confidential, personal missions, and some are purely social like the odd jobs which the Prince of Wales handles for the King.

But Mr. Roosevelt doesn't want to add Jimmie to the White House secretariat and put him on a salary, because of the possible backfire from the country. That is the reason for all of the mystery about Jimmie coming to Washington, and the White House denials that he would join the secretariat.

James—Mr. Roosevelt calls him "My little son, Jimmie"—because he is over six feet tall—is in the insurance business in Boston and New York. That further complicates the matter because the White House doesn't want his prominent presence here to be used to boost his insurance business. Competitors are complaining enough about having to buck a member of the royal family for business. One Republican newspaper is said to be nosing around Boston now gathering up the complaints of discontented rivals.

Son Jimmie has done a good deal of political elbow work for his father. He stood by throughout the 1932 campaign and has traveled with him much of the time since. He hasn't spent much time in Washington, however.

Political Parade: New England Republicans were caught in a late frost at their Boston meeting. Bigwigs stayed away. They are glad they did. The meeting was overrun with lady Republicans who insisted on singing "Brighten the Corner Where You Are" to pep up the proceedings. Day attendance, 350. At the banquet, 1,000. The two leading speakers sang about Ickes in different keys which didn't harmonize . . . Maryland Republicans have decided to delay their regional meeting until fall and maybe longer . . . Midwest Republicans are planning a real show at the Lincoln shrine in Springfield, Ill., next month. They're going clear back to the party's founding saint to get a fresh Republican start . . . Gov. Nice of Maryland is going into the 1936 Presidential race. But the Republicans could get him for Vice President if they really tried . . . Father Coughlin's effort to carry the gospel of his National Union for Social Justice into the highways and byways has run into opposition. Certain members of the hierarchy won't permit him to make sectarian speeches in their territory. In Detroit he has a friendly bishop . . . Huey Long's third party hopes have sunk further since the Northwest insurgents held their week-end conference here and turned a cold shoulder to him. . . . Traffic rules for 1936 call for Mr. Roosevelt to pass the Republicans on the left, near the top of the hill.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Democratic Chairman Farley were in top form in fielding the ball after the Chamber of Commerce knocked a long fly to right field last week.

Mr. Roosevelt put over the picture of business being divided inside with the majority not supporting the anti-Administration stand of the chamber. That was the political tactician at work.

Chairman Farley took the role of hard-boiled realist. He said "that crowd" never had really been with the Administration and that it couldn't be counted on next year. He is going after the mass vote, including the relief vote, although, of course, you understand there isn't going to be any politics in relief. Farley will spend practically no time trying to get the Chamber of Commerce vote. It would be like sitting on a china egg.

The silver jubilee, not King George's but our own, goes merrily along. Jewelers protest that the Government's forcing up of silver prices will throw thousands of silversmiths and jewelry people out of work. Peru follows Mexico and puts an embargo on export of silver to check the melting of Peruvian coins, which are now worth more as metal than as money. Chile and Costa Rica may have to do likewise. And possibly Colombia. Sorry, but we may have to put silver up even higher. We'd like to be good neighbors, but the silver Senators make it very difficult.

Sir Josiah Stamp, the British banker and monetary expert, says we are on the brink of dangerous inflation. Our own experts concede we have the basis for vast inflation in the great surplus of money and credit now lying idle in America. Many of them believe that some inflation is almost certain within the next year or two. They doubt if it will reach the disease stage—that of fantastic and almost worthless paper such as Germany saw. As one of them puts it, such extreme inflation would require even greater stupidity than we have shown thus far.

But wait a minute. What is inflation? Everyone has his own definition. Lately the term has been modified so much that it has become practically synonymous with normal good times. Almost everybody predicts that will come. Few believe inflation in the sense of extreme and rapid depreciation of currency will come.

A good rule of thumb definition of inflation: A marked and progressive rise in commodity prices which is not accompanied by an equivalent increase in production and consumption of goods and services. Or, a great surplus of money and credit which forces up prices. In short, a rise in prices which is not explained by natural demand for goods or services.

Commodity prices are usually watched. But in 1928-29 inflation did not take the form of rapidly rising commodity prices. That time it was in the stock market principally.

The big question is whether the Federal Reserve System will have the nerve to put on the brakes when recovery threatens to cross the line into inflation. That takes plenty of nerve. The system would have to be prepared to take the blame for the recession that is likely to follow. Look what punishment the Federal Reserve Board took when it put the screws on after the war. If the board is politically controlled, the job is even harder. That's the problem at the bottom of the pending banking legislation.

Watch the bonus maneuver of the Administration crowd in the Senate this week. If it looks like the Harrison compromise is destined to be defeated, a number of Administration Senators are likely to swing over to the inflationary Patman bill rather than the milder Vinson bill on the ground that this would provide an easier veto set-up for Mr. Roosevelt.

Latin America Warns Jobless On Dreams of a 'Last Frontier'

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

The "Last Frontier"—the one that was too tough for Tex Rickard and Alfalfa Bill Murray—is gone.

It lies, not within the boundaries of the United States, but in South America, more specifically in Brazil, where the Amazon twists through the jungle to the Atlantic.

Deep in that wilderness, in hut villages along the river banks, there still live a handful of the 50,000 Americans who dreamed of a rich empire in the jungle.

Tonight the Pan-American Union warned Americans who have been battered by the depression and want to make a fresh start in a newer land that the wealth of Brazil is a mirage.

"It should be remembered," the warning read, "that the Latin-American nations are just beginning to emerge from a period of economic depression, and one of the major problems they are facing is that of finding employment for many thousands of their own nationals who are out of work. To that end most of these countries have enacted legislation restricting immigration."

Each Enterprise Collapsed.

Ever since the Civil War Americans have tried to establish colonies in South America. The record has been one of unbroken failure. Early in the twentieth century Alfalfa Bill Murray led 50 Midwesterners to Bolivia with the idea of establishing an agricultural community. Crops flourished, but markets were scarce, and the colonists soon saw that there was no profit to be made. A collection was taken up by other Americans, in that section to send the colonists back in steerage, and no one dreamed then that some day Alfalfa Bill would be Governor of Oklahoma.

Tex Rickard picked Paraguay and the cattle business as his longshot for a million dollars. His failure was attributed to lack of marketing facilities, unfavorable climatic conditions and insects which harassed the Americans. He came back to the United States to find there was more money to be made matching Jack Dempsey against Gene Tunney.

Started by Southerners.

Southerners who vowed never to live in the United States again after the Union won the Civil War started this migration. Slavery still existed in Brazil and the Confederates visioned a new Southland of white houses with wide verandas and slaves picking cotton in the fields. Dr. J. McF. Gaston, a surgeon in the Confederate Army, headed one delegation; the Rev. Ballard Dean, of Mississippi, led another, and a Col. McMullen migrated at the head of a band from Texas.

They hacked their way back into the jungle and established little towns of about 200 inhabitants each. In the yellowed pages of an old book at the Pan-American Union Library there is a report by Herbert Smith, a traveler who came upon one of these settlements nine years after it was built.

"They were people from Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama," he wrote. "They knew how the frontier game should be played; lean, hard men with their wives and children; men who had come to stay. But they were burdened with debts, living in squalor, with broken down bodies and discouraged hearts. Out of the 200, there were only 50 left."

Some of the Americans became vagrants and organized themselves into bands to ride the countryside asking alms — "beggars on horseback" is what they came to be known to the natives.

The original colonists retained their American citizenship, but their children became citizens of Brazil. Instead of carving out a new empire, the colonists found themselves absorbed into Brazilian life, until, in 1926, "only 12 or 15 survivors, including the second generation," could be found in one town that once contained 200 Americans.

Dr. W. H. Haas, of Northwestern University, told the United Press recently of how he encountered an aged American woman in the Brazilian jungle, perhaps the only survivor of the Confederate migration.

"She told me about her father's extensive plantation in Alabama," he said, "with the slaves singing as they worked in the cotton fields. She remembered roses climbing about a tall-columned porch. Her clothing was bedraggled and she didn't even have shoes on her feet. She was an old lady, living in the past."

Bolters Decide Time Is Here For New Party

Amlie, of Wisconsin, Gives Out Resolution of Secret Conference.

By the Associated Press.

Sentiment of political "left-wingers," who favor a third party movement, yesterday was described by an officially appointed spokesman as "almost unanimous that the New Deal was unable to cope with the present crisis intelligently."

The spokesman, Representative Amlie (Progressive), of Wisconsin, issued a formal statement after conferring with the group of about 100 Saturday night. This conference agreed the time was propitious for organization of a third party to place a national ticket in the field in 1936.

The sentiment was general, Amlie said, "that action through a new party was necessary to protect the interests of the bulk of the population, particularly workers and farmers." The group, he continued, "decided that every effort should be made to unite the forces available in time for the next election."

Western Rally Called.

The meeting, Amlie also disclosed, unanimously adopted a resolution calling for a conference in the Middle West, "with the widest possible representation from economic, political, social and other organizations, and from all parts of the country." Amlie was named to head a committee on arrangements for this conference, which probably will be held in Chicago in June or July.

The resolution declared the aim of the new party "must be the establishment of an economy of abundance, an economic system of production for use instead of for profit."

Explaining the reason for secrecy about the gathering, Amlie said it was merely "exploratory, to determine how much sentiment exists in different parts of the country and in different movements for putting of a genuinely progressive ticket in the field in 1936."

It was called "without publicity," he continued, and by becoming public "apparently prevented certain members of the Senate and House who were expected to be present from attending."

Socialists Represented.

"Half a dozen members of the House, members of the progressive bloc, attended, and about 100 individuals, described as progressives and radicals, from as far West as Oklahoma," he said. "Several persons prominent in the labor movement and in Socialist organization were present."

Amlie said presidential candidates were not discussed. The Wisconsin progressive added that "we are radical" and "are willing to go farther than any of the liberal bloc in the Senate."

Efforts will be made, he said, to bring into the movement liberal groups in California, Socialists, technocrats, labor and farm organizations. He forecast a possibility that both the old parties, Democratic and Republican, would eventually pass out of existence, and that the "profit system will give way to collectivism of industry."

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of former Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania, and Alfred Bingham, son of former Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, conservative Republican, attended the meeting. Bingham was elected secretary of the conference.

Roosevelt Back After Chilly Cruise on River

President Roosevelt returned to the White House for Sunday night supper after an overnight cruise down the Potomac River aboard the Government yacht Sequoia.

With him on the trip were Edward Flynn, political leader of the Bronx, and Mrs. Flynn; Miss Marguerite LeHand, White House secretary, and Raymond Moley, magazine editor and close friend.

The cruise was made chilly by sharp winds, it was reported. Mr. Roosevelt motored directly to the White House after the Sequoia docked at the Navy Yard.

Carmody Urges Action by U. S. Against Mexico

In Letter to President, K. of C. Head Deplores Catholic Persecution.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 5.—In a letter addressed to President Roosevelt today, Martin H. Carmody, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, asked that the Government "exercise its good offices in behalf of persecuted Catholics in Mexico."

The appeal, Carmody said, was approved by the Knights of Columbus committee on Mexican conditions.

The letter declared that the Mexican government "directs aggressively a continuous propaganda throughout the United States to promote its Soviet philosophy of power," and charged that the Mexican government was openly hostile to "our form of government, our free institutions and our principles of civil and religious liberty."

Criticising the State Department for remaining "silent and inactive" in the face of protests for various individuals and organizations, Carmody said several Mexican States had forced Catholic churches to close altogether, that "their priests have been murdered, imprisoned or banished" and that "atheism and Red communism" are taught in the schools.

"Because of these persecutions, of which our Government can not be without the knowledge, thousands of religionists and political refugees are being driven across the Mexican border into our country and forced to seek the charity of the United States," the appeal read.

"In the face of these conditions, we are more than justified in asking why does not our Government now exercise its good offices in behalf of the persecuted Catholics of Mexico, as on so many occasions in the past it has well, honorably and effectively interposed in behalf of other religionists under similar conditions in other countries."

Treasury's 'Conscience Fund' Has Now Climbed to $618,263

By the United Press.

America's guilty consciences, first officially recorded in 1811, have swelled the Treasury's famed "conscience fund" to $618,263.68, officials revealed last night.

The last remittance was made April 13 when the conscience fund, more prosaically known as document No. 126,420, received $20.

The fund is the place of deposit for money received from anonymous donors who have cheated the Treasury of tax money and who seek to make restitution to ease their consciences.

There were five remittances on April 11, ranging from $1 to $12. April 10 brought $15.25 and $1.62 was received on April 6. Thus far in 1935 $2,281.72 has been added to the fund.

Depression years apparently make for easier consciences. In 1929 guilty consciences added $20,999.94 to the Government's income. By 1932 contributions had dropped to only $2,924.88 and since then they have averaged about $7,000 a year.

AAA Program Gains Support Of Dixie Group

9-State Conference Backs Process Tax as Curley Leaves for Attack.

Qualified support of the AAA farm program came yesterday from a new quarter, the Southern Policy Conference, as Gov. James M. Curley left Boston to testify against the cotton processing tax and Japanese imports at today's meeting of the Cabinet Textile Committee.

"I have facts and figures which back up every claim made by manufacturers concerning the blighting effect of the processing tax and Japanese imports on the New England textile industry," the Governor told the Associated Press.

Meantime, the AAA took stock of operations, announcing that $777,540,894.96 had been received from processing taxes up to April 1, while expenditures were $776,103,578.10. Farmers received $678,416,926.45 of this in benefit payments, $63,853,543.69 went for removal of surpluses and administrative expenses were $33,833,107.96.

Nine States in Conference.

Organization of the Southern Policy Conference, composed of representatives from nine Southern States, was announced following publication of a memorandum adopted by the group at a recent meeting in Atlanta.

Asserting that "hitherto the views of the South have often been represented by exclusive economic interests on the one hand, or political sensationalists on the other," the group set out its purpose to present the more general views of the South.

Unanimous approval of the Bankhead farm tenant bill was expressed. The conference also recognized "advantages of the AAA program in regard to cotton and tobacco," but fear was expressed that unless this program is revised the cotton export market will be lost.

Favor Lower Loan Rate.

The principle of crop control should be continued, the group declared, until increased consumption of cotton is assured. As the most likely step to promote exports, the conference favors lowering the present 12-cent loan rate on cotton to 10 cents, and, ultimately, its abolition.

The conference elected a general committee, headed by H. C. Nixon, of Tulane University, Louisiana, and including the following from Virginia and Maryland: Richard F. Cleveland, Baltimore; Virginius Dabney, Richmond, and Francis Pickens Miller, Fairfax, Va., who was named secretary.

The AAA report showed that benefit payments were made this way: Cotton, $224,962,539.09; wheat, $162,444,856.12; tobacco, $31,216,317.34; corn hogs, $253,536,280.21, and sugar, $6,256,933.69. Removal of surpluses cost: Hogs, $46,081,425.74; wheat, $6,097,239.21; dairy products, $10,958,431.25; sugar, $365,536.44, and peanuts, $350,911.05.

First Allotting Of Work Funds Due This Week

Board Meets Tomorrow at White House to Weigh Applications.

By the Associated Press.

First cash allotments to projects through which the Administration hopes to employ thousands of jobless are scheduled to put new nicks this week in the month-old $4,000,000,000 works fund.

The pivotal allotment board was summoned to a White House session tomorrow—its first formal meeting. Though executive orders setting up this and other new agencies have not been issued, a number of applications were to be submitted by Frank C. Walker, head of the applications clearing house.

There was speculation, too, over what new decisions may have been reached by President Roosevelt during his week-end cruise on the Potomac. In the party was Raymond Moley, former Assistant Secretary of State and a close adviser since before the 1932 election.

The President took with him a bundle of reports and before leaving Saturday conferred with Daniel W. Bell, acting Budget Director.

Plans known to be ready for allotment board consideration covered $100,000,000 in non-Federal projects approved by Secretary Ickes, chairman of the allotment board. The go-ahead signal was awaited as well on $301,000,000 of PWA projects and allotments to Interior Department agencies whose funds were impounded to keep the relief administration going during debates on the works bill.

The relief administration land purchase program, which aims at withdrawing 17,000,000 unproductive acres from cultivation by July 1, was slated to get back $9,000,000 also impounded.

Job-seekers and project-backers have besieged the Capital in about equal numbers since President Roosevelt signed the works bill, but the Civilian Conservation Corps and the Rural Resettlement Division are the only activities which have received authorization to go ahead.

justified opposition to the Federal demands.

"For the first time there has been a tightening of the Illinois relief commission's purse strings," he asserted in a statement. They are being forced to purge their rolls of chiselers. The pay roll brigade has been laid off and when they get money to start operations again I don't believe they will dare put all their thousands back to work."

Last week, after defeat of his bill, Gov. Horner blamed the Republican House members and asserted their constituents would hold them liable.

The Illinois Chamber of Commerce, in a statement, said the proposed sales tax increase could be averted by proper policing of retailers. It asserted evasions and cheating, under the present 2 per cent tax rate, approximate $20,000,000 annually.

Karl Lockner, Communist leader and chairman of the unemployment council, tonight said a demonstration would be staged Tuesday in front of the Chicago home of Representative Benjamin Adamowski to protest the 3 per cent sales tax.

Adamowski, Democratic leader in the House, has attempted to muster votes for the bill in the House. Lockner said his cohorts would advocate reopening of relief stations with money from the general tax fund. The council also, he said, would send a delegation to Springfield tomorrow or Tuesday and would ask to be heard by the Legislature.

the regular transports used by TWA and other commercial lines. It has been outfitted with special gas tanks for the long speed flights. It is the same "mystery" plane used by Eugene Vidal, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and other commerce fliers on a series of flights over portions of the Pacific ocean in March. At that time Vidal tested a new radio compass for ocean flying.

Here to complete arrangements for the speed runs, Tomlinson stated that he hoped to be able to make another try at his own transcontinental flight record in the near future. He added that he lost 30 minutes on the cross country dash running around a storm in the Rockies. This made his time 11 hours whereas he believes the flight from Los Angeles to New York can be made in 10 hours and 30 minutes.

No definite date has been set for the first of the high altitude speed runs but it is understodo that weather permitting, Tomlinson will take-off Thursday or Friday on the first of the flights.

Peek Questions Hull Idea U. S. Must Buy More

Trade Adviser Advocates Bilateral Treaties, Not Trade Pacts.

Hull. Whether Mr. Roosevelt will accede to any reopening of this controversial subject was doubtful. The President remarked in response to a question at his Friday press conference that Peek was not prepared to vouch for all his figures.

In making public his report, Peek advocated bilateral trade agreements, similar to the one made with Cuba, which would be extended only conditionally. He indicated plainly he is opposed to the present "most-favored-Nation" policy of the State Department. Under this policy, the same benefits that are accorded in a special treaty are extended to all other countries without requiring concessions in return.

"I don't think we can depend on things taking care of themselves when all other countries are trying to channelize trade," the President's adviser said.

Capital Loss $970,000,000.

Explaining his figures, he said they showed that foreign countries "had several hundred million dollars in this country last year which might have been used to buy merchandise, or services, or be applied on the war debts. Instead, the money was used to buy securities."

The United States had a favorable trade balance of $478,000,000 in 1934, his report showed. Deducting the amount spent by American tourists abroad and figuring the difference between services and interest and dividend payments to and from this country, this figure is brought down to $381,000,000 as the net favorable balance.

Peek then sets out that this country bought gold in the amount of $1,217,000,000, silver in the amount of $86,000,000, and currency worth $48,000,000—a total of $1,351,000,000. This placed the United States in debt to the rest of the world in 1934 in the amount of $970,000,000, representing the difference between $381,000,000 and $1,351,000,000, he figured.

Inflation Fear Involved.

In explanation of what was done with this money, the Peek report showed that foreigners either redeemed their own securities in this country or purchased American securities to a total of $1,900,000,000. As this was going on, Americans bought United States stocks held abroad or foreign securities amounting to $930,000,000, which again leaves $970,000,000 as the amount of capital assets transferred.

Most of the Peek figures were contained in a report by the Department of Commerce, issued April 8. This report said that the 1934 reduction in this country's international credit position "was, however, in substantial part merely a return flow of funds that had been ordered or accumulated abroad in the preceding year."

This explanation takes into account the flight of American capital in 1933, because of dollar devaluation and the fear of inflation. In addition, the Department of Commerce reported that the return movement "was augmented by a tendency of foreign funds to seek safety here as a result of political unsettlement in several of the gold bloc countries of Europe."

Cites War Debt Doubts.

According to the Peek report, the United States had an international creditor position of $16,897,000,000 at the end of 1934. However, the United States held this position, the survey warned, largely because of two items, both doubtful.

These items were the war debts, which were figured at $10,304,000,000, and American investments abroad, given as $7,823,000,000. Of the war debts, "only the obligations of the Republic of Finland, with a principal value of $8,400,000, were serviced during 1934," it was pointed out.

"Until service is resumed on the war debts in default," the report continues, "the often-stated necessity of our purchasing from abroad additional goods—gold, silver, or services—in order to create sufficient dollar exchange to permit the transfer of funds for this debt service, is not apparent."

By the United Press.

The United States-Brazilian reciprocal trade agreement will come before the present session of the Brazilian Congress for ratification, embassy officials here understood last night. The new congress convened May 3.

Action to be taken by Brazill will be watched eagerly abroad, as the agreement affects coffee, cocoa, automobiles, steel and other large commercial interests. Its ratification and operation would have an influence on agreements already negotiated or projected by the United States with other coffee-growing countries of the Western Hemisphere.

The agreement, signed here February 2, 1935, requires ratification by the Brazilian Congress, but not by the United States Congress. It would take effect 30 days after exchange of the United States presidential instrument of approval and the Brazilian instrument of ratification.

Will Address Graduates.

Leonardtown, Md., May 5 (AP).—Dr. J. D. Blackwell, president of the State Teachers College at Salisbury, has accepted an invitation to deliver the commencement address at Margaret Brent High School June 15. Forty-two seniors will be graduated at the exercises.

who engage in "over-the-counter" business must register under the new regulations.

"On and after August 1, 1935," the new regulations provide, "no broker or dealer, singly or with any other person or persons, shall make use of the mails or any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce for the purpose of making or creating or enabling another to make or create a market, otherwise than on a national securities exchange, such market being hereafter designated as an over-the-counter market, for both the purchase and sale of any security or use any facility of any such market, unless he shall be registered with the commission."

"This rule shall not apply to any broker or dealer who transacts business only in exempted securities, commercial paper, bankers' acceptances, or commercial bills, or in unregistered securities, the market in which is predominantly intrastate and which have not previously been registered under the securities act of 1934 or listed on an exchange."

Must File By July 1.

Reigstration of brokers and dealers will become effective 30 days after they file application for such reigstration on a form to be prescribed on May 15 and to be known as "Form 1-M." Thus in order to do business after August 1, all "over-the-counter" brokers and dealers must file their registration statements on or before July 1. Such registration will terminate on July 31, 1936.

After appropriate notice and hearing, the SEC may refuse registration to any broker or dealer who has "willfully misrepresented or concealed any material fact in his registration statement, or in any application, report or document submitted in connection with his registration, or in any proceeding before the commission with respect to such registration."

Registration also may be refused any broker or dealer who "has been convicted within ten years preceding the filing of such registration statement of any felony or misdemeanor involving the purchase or sale of any security or arising out of the conduct of the business of a broker or dealer" or who "is permanently or temporarily enjoined on the date of the filing of such registration statement, by order, judgment or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction entered within ten years preceding the filing of such registration statement, from engaging in or continuing any conduct or practice in connection with the purchase or sale of any security."

Sentence Not Factor.

For the purposes of this rule a person "shall be deemed to have been convicted if he has confessed guilt in open court or a verdict of guilty has been found against him, although judgment or sentence may have been suspended," the SEC provided.

Registration also may be revoked for any of the causes for which registration could be refused or if a broker or dealer willfully violates any provision of the 1933 securities act or the 1934 stock exchange control act, or any rule or regulation thereunder or has committed any fraud or engaged in any frudulent practice in the conduct of his business.

The fair trade practice rules prescribed by the SEC are summarized as follows:

No broker or dealer in the conduct of his business shall knowingly make any false, fraudulent or misleading statement or misrepresentation with respect to his registration with the SEC or with respect to the effect or meaning thereof.

No registered broker shall act as agent of both buyer or seller in any security transaction on an over-the-counter market unless he procures the written or telegraphic consent of both such buyer and seller at or before completion of the transaction or he makes written disclosure that he is so acting to both parties.

Writing Necessary.

A registered broker and dealer must disclose in writing to a customer whether he is acting as a dealer for his own account, as a broker for such customer or as a broker for some other person.

A registered broker or a dealer acting as broker for a customer he must disclose either the name of the person from whom such security was purchased or to whom it was sold and the day and time when such transaction took place or the fact that such information will be furnished on request of the customer.

Registered brokers and dealers must also disclose to customers the amount of commission paid to any other broker employed in such transaction and whether he is controlled by, or controls or is under common control with the issuer of such security, if such be the fact.

Registered brokers and dealers acting in an advisory capacity to customers shall not effect transactions for that customer in any security in which the in the course of his business he has a long or short position, or in the distribution or accumulation of which he has any direct or indirect financial interest or in which he holds or has granted or has knowledge that any principal for whom he is acting holds or has granted any option, unless these facts are clearly disclosed to the customer and the customer consents to the execution of the proposed transaction.

Consent Needed.

Registered brokers and dealers acting in an advisory capacity to customers shall not buy or sell to such customer any security for any account in which he or any principal for whom he is acting is interested, unless he obtains the wrtten or telegraphic consent of such customer to each such purchase or sale.

Meanwhile, the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council, Inc., yesterday made public its first annual report, covering its activities from its organization in December, 1933, to the close of 1934. In that period the council achieved certain settlements on behalf of American bondholders in Brazil, Dominican Republic and Germany and initiated negotiations or took other action on behalf of American bondholders in Cuba, Colombia, Peru and Uruguay.

The council, which was formed under Government auspices to protect Americans holding foreign bonds, reported that at the end of 1934 there were outstanding $5,469,085,190 of publicly offered dollar bonds issued or guaranteed by foreign governments or political subdivisions, and of that amount $1,825,375,250 were in default as to interest and $96,071,100 in default as to sinking fund only.

J. Reuben Clark, former Undersecretary of State, is president of the council.

Mayor Jackson Likely to Win Polling Contest

His Majority Is Reported in Doubt Because of Feud in Party.

lenger, Charles E. Moylan, by a majority of 22,492 votes.

The wounds of that fight, however, have not fully healed. Mr. Moylan with a show of enthusiasm has urged the election of Mr. Jackson. As is customary in party politics, the ward leaders who supported Mr. Moylan have rallied around Mr. Jackson with more or less enthusiasm.

Certain Coolness Notable.

Former Gov. Ritchie, as pointed out yesterday, has taken the stump for Mr. Jackson—he had no part at all in the primary—and has asked the Moylan followers to accept the verdict of the primary as final. Incidentally, despite his campaign efforts, Mr. Ritchie will be unable to vote for Mr. Jackson because he is registered at Annapolis and must reside six months in Baltimore under the law before he can vote there.

Despite the declarations of these leaders, the rank and file of their following has shown a coolness to the mayor's candidacy and while they will go through the motions Tuesday, they will not "break any legs," as one put it, in getting out the vote.

At this point it should be pointed out that the municipal primary election last month demonstrated that Baltimore is not a politically machine-ridden city. The Democratic machine, for the most part, was for Mr. Moylan, but only a minority of affiliated Democrats can be considered a part of this machine and it was evident that the independent Democrats voted for Mayor Jackson, because he has been a good administrator.

The support of the independent voters of the city—those not tied up with either Democratic or Republican organizations in a partisan manner—is cited as the chief reason for the belief that Mayor Jackson is certain of reelection. These persons—while probbaly friends of Mr. Ritchie—have no interest in the rivalries and quarrels of leaders. They are interested only in a sound, economical administration for their city and in general they apparently believe this goal can best be achieved through the reelection of Mayor Jackson.

But, while Mr. Jackson's victory seems assured, the same can not be said for George Sellmayer, Democratic candidate for president of the city council. Mr. Sellmayer is affiliated with the Curran-Ennis faction of Baltimore Democrats and he won in the primary only after a recount and then only by 57 votes, defeating John A. Meyer, who ran with Jackson support.

Mr. Meyer, a popular youth who has been a judge of the traffic court for the last five years, has been silent since his defeat. Many of his followers are bitter, contending that he was "counted out" and while they say they intend voting for Mayor Jackson they will vote for S. Carle Cooling, the Republican candidate, for president of the city council.

A story has been circulated that Mayor Jackson would prefer the election of Mr. Cooling, a personal and business friend of long-standing. The Mayor has publicly denied this and has emphasized in his speeches that he wants Mr. Sellmayer elected. Nevertheless, that situation has been used to work up resentment against Mayor Jackson within the Democratic Party.

Sellmayer Chances Weighed.

If Mr. Jackson's victory is a landslide, he may carry Mr. Sellmayer along with him. If the Jackson election is by a comparatively close vote then Mr. Sellmayer's chances seem doubtful. There is no doubt that L. Walter Graham, the veteran Democratic comptroller of Baltimore, will easily defeat Henry Stockbridge 3d, the Republican candidate. The Democrats also are expected to elect the majority of the city council.

If Mr. Jackson is re-elected, he will be the dominant leader in Baltimore for the next four years. Moreover, he will have a claim for first consideration for the gubernatorial nomination in 1938. His reelection would prevent Senator Millard E. Tydings from becoming the dominant Democratic leader of the State.

Mr. Jackson's defeat, on the other hand, would leave Senator Tydings in absolute control of the party. But it also would leave the party in a somewhat chaotic condition, since the Jackson followers would be certain to resolve to punish the Curran-Ennis and Ritchie factions in future contests. The only solution probably would be an entirely "new deal" in Maryland Democracy."

a picturesque state procession from Buckingham Palace to the cathedral, along a route lined with stands and packed with millions of persons, seeking a glimpse of King George and the Queen.

The procession itself will be particularly imposing, judged by previous standards. There will be, in fact, seven distinct processions in the line of march, starting with Prime Minisiter J. Ramsay MacDonald's group, leaving the hall at 10 a. m.

In the first carriage will be the prime minister and his daughter, Ishbel. In the following carriages of this group will be the dominion prime ministers and other colonial dignitaries.

The second group will include the speakers' procession. The third is the lord high chancellor's procession.

Next will be the Lord Mayor of London's procession. At Temple Bar the mayor presents the city's pearl sword to the King, signifying permission to enter the city. The lord mayor then will proceed to St. Paul's.

Fifth comes the Duke of York's procession. Sixth, the Prince of Wales with his captains and escort, will drive through the densely packed streets, accompanied by the Duke of Gloucester, his brother, and other royalty.

At the end, in the seventh group, will be the King and Queen, preceded by detachments of royal horse artillery, dragoons and hussars, and the sovereign's escort of lifeguards.

The King and Queen will ride in the first state carriage, the Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught and the Princess Alice, who is the Countess of Athlone, and the Earl of Athlone will be in the second, and other court attendants in the following carriages.

Message From Prince.

The official jubilee program opens with a message from the Prince of Wales, which concludes: "I know I am speaking for their majesties when I say that of the countless expressions of good will that will make this day memorable, none gives them deeper satisfaction than the success of this great enterprise in which everyone has an opportunity to share."

While the thanksgiving service is the principal item of tomorrow's program, other important events are scheduled for the evening. The King, pressing a button, will light a bonfire in Hyde Park, while at the same moment Boy Scouts will start a chain of bonfires around the entire island.

The day officially will end with a broadcast to the Empire by King George from Buckingham Palace, lasting three minutes and to be heard throughout the world.

Inquest Called In Wreck Fatal To Coogan, Sr.

'Jackie's' Story Other Car Caused Crash Killing 4 to Be Probed.

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, May 5.—Jackie Coogan, one-time boy film star, arrived in an ambulance at Physicians and Suregons Hospital tonight, sole survivor of a tragic auto wreck on rocky La Posta Gorge highway which took the lives of four persons, neluding Coogan's father, John L. Coogan, sr.

Jackie was suffering from shock and severe, but not critical, injuries to his chest after a miraculous escape from death. He rode the rumble seat of a careening car down a 40-foot ledge after it had caped an embankment on a hairpin urn, racing down the steep gorge t 70 miles an hour.

Junior Durkin, 19-year-old motion picture actor; Robert Horner, film writer and actor, and Charles Jones, foreman of the Coogan ranch, were the others killed.

Inquest Is Ordered.

An inquest was ordered on the trength of young Coogan's story hat an automobile approaching rom the opposite direction forced he Coogan car, driven by Coogan, r., off the highway and over an -foot embankment.

Deputy Coroner Dave Gershon, of San Diego County, who investigated he accident, said he would release he bodies of Coogan's father, Horner and Durkin tonight, and they will be returned here. Jones' body will be taken to the Coogan ranch.

Mrs. Coogan, Jackie's mother, and Patricia Ellis, blonde film star—who was invited to the party but did not go because she slipped in a bathtub at home, hurting her hip—remained at San Diego tonight. They hurried there last night by airplane.

"Jackie" Still Dazed.

Mrs. Coogan did not know of her husband's death until she heard a chance remark at the airport.

Young Coogan, still dazed by his experience, described haltingly through painfully swollen lips the swift tragedy that overtook the party as it was hurrying homeward o the Coogan ranch after a day's outing.

He said the approaching car swerved suddenly across the center ine of the highway. Coogan, sr., driving, swung out to avoid the collision. His racing car careened off the concrete, hurdled a ditch and went over the edge, knifing through five fence posts.

Rolled Over Five Times.

It somersaulted once and Coogan, in the rumble seat, was able to jump clear. He said Jones, riding beside him, was flung out at the first somersault. He was found several feet from the wreck, his head severed.

Coogan said the car rolled over five times as it crashed to the creek bottom. His father, Durkin and Horner were pinned under the wreckage.

He was taken to Pine Valley, a nearby town, by M. E. McGee, El Centro, Calif., druggist. Postmaster James Russell, of Pine Valley, called Mrs. Coogan and she and Miss Ellis hurried southward.

Gales Continue To Batter Brazil

Stay Refused, Slayer of Girl Awaits Death

'American Tragedy' Killer of Sweetheart Alone in Death House.

wards as "perfectly normal" throughout the day. He showed little sign of emotion.

"His conversation was about common-place things," the warden's office explained. He was interested in the weather, particularly.

He is alone in the death house.

Records of the "American tragedy" case were compiled by prison officials today as they went through the preliminaries to the execution. Edwards' head was shaved, and it was recorded that he will be the 442d person to die in the electric chair.

Juror Falls From Window.

Meanwhile, in Wilkes-Barre, John Luff, one of the jurors who convicted Edwards, came into the limelight by tumbling from a second-story window in his home. It was on a declaration that he had expressed a desire to see Edwards "burn" that a futile appeal was carried to the State Supreme Court.

The Rev. Thomas Hughes, Baptist minister from Wilkes-Barre, spent several hours with the youth, at Edwards' request.

Edwards and Margaret Crain became members of the Rev. Mr. Hughes' church last summer, while she visited his family in Edwardsville, overlooking the collieries, adjoining Wilkes-Barre.

Condemned Man Sleeps.

Prior to this Edwards and Freda had been regular attendants at a small church in the mining colony.

The white-walled death house was made ready this morning for the "dude of the hard coal belt" convicted last autumn of slaying his neighborhood sweetheart while they swam one June night in Harveys Lake, near Wilkes-Barre.

The State contended he beat her with a blackjack so he could marry Margaret Crain, a music teacher of East Aurora, N. Y., whom he wooed on the campus of Mansfield Teacher College.

Edwards, too, was ready. Refreshed by a long night of deep sleep, he exhibited none of the nervousness which threatened his collapse as he was removed from the Luzerne County Jail to the penitentiary before daybreak yesterday.

He chatted this morning with prison attaches. He wrote several letters and ate all of his breakfast consisting of a cereal, a soft-boiled egg, toast and coffee. He smoked one cigarette after another.

This year's exhibit, held in the Community House, listed 40 works.

Cobb Flays Radicalism In Cincinnati Speech

Judge James A. Cobb, of the Municipal Court, who spoke yesterday in Cincinnati on the Citizenship Day program sponsored by the Young Men's Christian Association, decried "false prophets abroad in the land who lead the weak to depart from the traditions of our past."

In contrast with the promises and operations of Communism, he urged his hearers to develop an attitude of duty and sense of obligation toward the Government which has granted rights and privileges enjoyed by them.

Hungary Arms Plea Supported In Italy, Austria

Conciliation on Demands Wins Agreement to Theoretical Parity.

By the Associated Press.

Venice, May 5.—Italy and Austria have agreed to Hungary's demand for theoretical parity in armaments, it was reliably stated today.

In return, Kolomon Von Kanya, Hungarian foreign minister, told the tripower parley preliminary to the Danubian conference in June that the matter need not be discussed at Rome. Italy and France are expected to suggest that Little Entente countries — Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania—consider the matter at their forthcoming conference.

Hungary's willingness to conciliate followed upon telephonic conversations to Budapest between Von Kanya and Premier Julius Goemboes, of Hungary, which lasted until early today. A formula of compromise was drafted this afternoon.

Italy, it is understood, offered Hungary some economic concessions in return for Hungary's more conciliatory attitude. After today's meeting it was announced Hungary would certainly come to the Danubian conference.

Hungary also raised the question of Hapsburg restoration. Von Kanya put it simply on a juridical basis, saying it was not Hungary's desire to push the matter. He wants the Danubian conference to define definitely whether Hapsburg restoration is to be considered an internal question of Austria and Hungary or an international question affecting other countries. Hungary wants it considered an internal matter.

Much of today's meeting was taken up with conversations among experts whom the three statesmen brought with them. They discussed points raised by a prospective treaty of noninterference.

A final meeting will be held tomorrow.

Indian Detects Clews of Attack In Desert Sands

Keen-Eyed Navajo Guide Gives Credence to Story of Levinson, Minor.

By the Associated Press.

Gallup, N. Mex., May 5.—A keen-eyed Navajo Indian tracker read from signs on the desert's surface today a story substantiating those of two Eastern labor defense volunteers that they were abducted Thursday night by a band of hooded vigilantes, beaten and thrown out of a motor car.

Four black hoods, such as David Levinson and Robert Minor said their abductors wore, and other evidence of the Easterners' night of terror in the wilderness were found by the pair, State police and newspapermen on the Navajo Reservation some 30 miles from Gallup.

"Men thrown from car here," said Bene Tohe, the Navajo tracker, reading from imprints on the desert sands.

Governor Promises Probe.

It was at Bene Tohe's hogan that the men appeared Friday morning, asking for aid after assertedly spending the night wandering through a rainstorm in search of aid.

Levinson, a Philadelphia attorney, and Minor, New York communistic writer, came here as representatives of the International Labor Defense to defend ten miners charged with murder as a result of the deaths of three men, including Sheriff M. R. Carmichael, in a riot April 12, growing out of the eviction of an unemployed miner.

Gov. Clyde M. Tingley promised an investigation of the asserted abduction would be pressed despite a heated declaration of C. P. McIntosh, assistant district attorney, that the incident was "framed."

Points Out Heel-Prints.

With State Policemen Earl Irish and Jack Dean, newspapermen and three associates, Levinson and Minor went today to the stone Indian hogan, or shanty, where they said they sought shelter from the rain after being ejected from motor cars of the kidnapers.

On the way they met Tohe, whose hogan is about 2 miles from the other hut, en route with his wife and family to Tohatchi, a Navajo settlement.

Tohe showed the men their tracks, prints of rubber heels in the mud and told them what they had done as they walked to the abandoned hogan. His keen eyes taking in the most minute detail of the three-day-old tracks, since swept by rain, Tohe back-trailed to where the imprints of three sets of car wheels were found.

Following the car trail, the hoods, made of dyed pillow cases were found, as well as eyeglasses, money, blood-stained underwear the men said had been used as a blindfold, a partly burned hat and a piece of rope, also partly burned.

At the point where Tohe said the men were thrown out, he found four sets of footprints. Two were those of Levinson and Minor, he said, the others of their abductors. One of the latter had small heel-prints, which he decided were those of cowboy boots.

West Point Inspected By the Little Congress

West Point, N. Y., May 5 (AP).—Members of "The Little Congress," composed of secretaries and clerks of United States Representatives, inspected the United States Military Academy today, but a heavy rain caused postponement of a full dress parade scheduled in their honor.

The 250 guests ate dinner in the mess hall with the Cadet Corps, made a tour of inspection of the academy and met cadets appointed from their districts. Yesterday "The Little Congress" attended a luncheon in New York and "saw the sights."

Cromwell and Bride Acquire $20,000 Rugs

Bangkok, Siam, May 5 (AP).—Carrying $20,000 worth of ancient rugs, which a valet described as "not fit for hanging over my telephone booth," Mr. and Mrs. James H. R. Cromwell arrived today by airplane on their honeymoon.

Engine trouble forced Cromwell and his bride, the former Doris Duke, to spend the night at Rangoon. They said they were thrilled by the spectacle of sunrise over Mount Everest, on which they looked down during their flight from Calcutta.

Rabbi Wise Excoriates Dreiser as Anti-Semite

New York, May 5 (AP).—Theodore Dreiser was described as a living tragedy today by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise as the latter deprecated what he termed the author's anti-semitism.

Rabbi Wise charged that Dreiser's "anti-semitic blasts sound as if they could not have been uttered without Hitler inspiration or Nazi animus."

He asked: "Is American liberalism to be judged and evaluated by the deed of Dreiser?"

23 Seized as Turkey Nips Revolution Plot

Hawks 'Ages Years' On His Worst Flight

Speedster's Plane at Mercy of Panama Storm.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, May 5.—Frank Hawks, American speed flier, hopped off at 12:51 p. m. (Central standard time) today on a flight from Colon, Panama, to Los Angeles after "the worst experience of my flying career."

After leaving Colon at 3:15 a. m., Hawks said he "ran into a severe storm and climbed 18,000 feet, but the motor froze, and we are coming down rapidly in darkness through the storm without an idea of what was beneath. At 13,000 feet the motor began to pick up and by 10,000 it was running normally.

"The storm lasted two hours, and I believe it cost me ten years of my life."

When Hawks reached the Mexican capital he had flown 6,175 miles in 30 hours 15 minutes since leaving Buenos Aires Friday. He is accompanied by a friend, Gage Irving. He planned to refuel at Nogales, Ariz.

Flu Epidemic Believed Ended By Lone Doctor

Death Toll Placed at 15; Planes, With Serum, Rush to Stricken Area.

By the Associated Press.

Point Barrow, Alaska, May 5.—Hope for a "breathing period" in which to bury the dead was expressed today by Dr. Henry W. Griest, medical missionary, who for two weeks has waged a single-handed battle against influenza in this Far North outpost.

Dr. Griest set the probable death toll at 15. Ten persons already have succumbed to the epidemic and five others are not expected to live.

Airplanes from the South, bringing needed serum, were watched for eagerly by the entire trading post community.

"We hope the crest of the epidemic has passed, said Dr. Griest. "There are only a few new cases, comparatively, although we still do not know about the native villages to the east."

The shortage of food, including eggs, milk and dried fruits, and inadequate hospital facilities and the lack of coffins were the greatest troubles facing Dr. Griest, who has fought heroically with his two nurses an epidemic which reached a total of 300 cases.

There was not enough lumber on hand to build coffins; so a shed had to be torn down and the lumber used.

Seattle, May 5 (AP).—Pilot M. D. Kirkpatrick, of Cordova, hopped off from Renton Airport here today to fly influenza vaccine sufficient for 50 Alaska epidemic suffers. The serum will be kept under refrigeration at Cordova as a reserve supply in case the vaccine rushed North from Juneau proves insufficient to combat the epidemic at Point Barrow, Alaska's farthest north settlement.

Fire Truck, Auto Crash; 1 Dead, 5 Hurt

Citizen, Arrested, Says He Didn't Hear Siren.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 5.—A fire department lieutenant was killed and three other firemen and two pedestrians were injured today when a fire truck, answering a false alarm was hit by a passenger car.

Lieut. Leo A. Murphy, 41, was killed when he was knocked off the truck. His body, hurled through the air for 20 feet, struck a mail and his son who were standing on the corner, injuring both of them.

Police arrested an 11-year-old boy for turning in the false alarm and said he will be held for juvenile authorities.

The driver of the passenger car, who gave his name as Morris Weiner, 40, was arrested on a charge of manslaughter. He told police he did not hear the fire siren and failed to stop to give the truck the right of way.

Weather Halts Earhart's Flight.

Mexico, D. F., May 5 (AP).—Amelia Earhart said today she probably would postpone her take-off on a projected nonstop flight to New York "for two or three days while awaiting favorable weather conditions."

Wisconsin Babe Safe After 2-Days' Wandering in Wilds

By the Associated Press.

Mauston, Wis., May 5.—A babe-lost-in-the-north-woods drama ended happily today with the finding of 21-month-old Thelma Ann Wilke, missing since Friday, playing unconcernedly in a thicket of scrub oaks 3 miles from her home, home.

Despite frosty temperatures as low as 30 degrees over the weekend, she was outwardly none the worse for her two nights in the open. But she was ordered under a physician's care over night to make certain she suffered no ill effects from exposure.

"Crackers" was her first request when Albert McLellan, a neighbor of her paralytic father, Stanley, 28, found her. McLellan was among the 800 men and boys led by Sheriff Morgan Rider, who took up the search today after a day and two nights of combing the woods produced only a wollen stocking cap and footprints in the soft ground.

The child underwent a cursory physical examination showing the only immediate ill effects of her experience were sunburn, a few scratches on the leg and a temperature of 101.

Thelma Ann didn't get her crackers, but her hunger was relieved by sips of milk and water.

The child wandered away from the yard of her home Friday as her mother drove a cow to a farm field nearby.

Belgrade Mob Battles Police In Voting Riot

2,000 Foes of Regime in Belief of Victory, Mass in Capital.

By the Associated Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 5.—police swung rubber batons vigorously tonight to disperse 2,000 anti-government demonstrators who had gathered to cheer what they believed was a victory in today's heated parliamentary elections.

Many skulls were bruised, but apparently no one was seriously hurt. It was the capital's only election day's disorder.

While the demonstrators believed they were cheering an opposition victory—real or moral—the government radio was telling another story.

All government sources maintained the regime of Premier Bogoljub Yevtich, which is carrying on the government of the assassinated King Alexander, won the indorsement of voters and some preliminary figures from what is known to be a Serb stronghold seemed to support this contention.

The government said it received 29,500 votes in Belgrade to the opposition's 9,000, while at Sarajevo the count was given as 7,000 for the government and 4,000 to the opposition.

(At Zagreb hundreds of youths belonging to the opposition were arrested and the government ordered foreign correspondents to leave Croatia.)

The opposition claimed an overwhelming majority in many regions. Anti-government forces said they carried virtually all of Croatia, Montenegro and Vojvodina, where they said Minister of Transportation Vujitch lost his mandate.

Airplanes hovered over the capital throughout the day, dropping government leaflets, and hundreds of government automobiles brought voters to the polls.

17,000 for Government.

The vote was public, and an unofficial check indicated the city count at mid-afternoon was 17,000 for the government and 9,000 for the united opposition, led by Vladko Matchek.

This showing elated the opposition, for the capital is a government stronghold and Matchek had conceded a nation-wide government victory.

There were no reports from the rest of the nation, which is isolated by a government order limiting the use of telephones and telegraphs.

A heated campaign preceded the voting.

Since the secret ballot is unknown in Yugoslavia, voters had to declare their names and choices "in a voice audible to the whole electoral committee."

Political Talk Banned Over Telephone Lines

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, May 5.—Unofficial reports from Zagreb said opponents of the Yugoslav government were rolling up a large majority throughout Crotia in today's parliamentary elections.

One opposition source said that the anti-government vote at Zagreb was 82 per cent and that it was even larger in the rural districts. Direct communication with Yugoslavia was difficult because telephone connections are broken when the conversation touches on politics.

Reich Reported Seeking Alliance With Finland

Moscow, May 5 (AP).—Reports that Germany has offered Finland a military and naval alliance in the case of war with Soviet Russia was published tonight by Tass, Soviet news agency, under a Geneva date line.

The Tass dispatch said the offer would be made shortly when a Finnish minister visits Berlin. The agency said the report caused unfavorable comment in Geneva, where the impression was created that Germany is continuing an aggressive policy while the rest of Europe strives for peace.

Dr. Durand Wins Medal For Aviation Research

New York, May 5 (AP).—William Frederick Durand, professor emeritus of mechanical engineering at Stanford University, has been awarded the 1935 Daniel Guggenheim medal for "notable achievement" in aviation, it was announced today.

Dr. Durand, the seventh Guggenheim medalist, is internationally known for his experimental research on Aeronautic propellors and other aircraft features, the medal board said. He now is writing a six-volume work on "aerodynamic theory."

N. Y. Tailors to Call 1-Day Protest Strike

New York, May 5 (AP).—The closing of 20,000 retail tailor shops in Greater New York for one day in protest against wage and working conditions in the cleaning and dyeing trades was voted today at a mass meeting of retail tailors. The date for the one-day protest strike will be set later in the week.

The tailors voted also to stage a massed parade of 50,000 in the industry to City Hall as a further protest on the day of the strike.

One local of the Cleaners, Dyers and Pressers Union is already out on strike against wage conditions.

Flandin Leads As Party Wins City Elections

Municipal Returns Show Overwhelming Vote for Ministry.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 5.—Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin led his cabinet to victory today in the campaign to retain municipal posts in the elections, results of which indicated little change in the political complexion of France.

Except for slight Socialist losses, incomplete returns showed tonight that office holders were reelected in virtually every instance.

The results were looked upon by observers as showing that the French are still divided along their old political lines, despite attempts of candidates to "whoop it up" with campaigns based on everything from German rearmament to the dole.

The balloting was conducted throughout the country with the same calm which characterized May Day celebrations, with only five arrests registered at midnight.

Virtually the only excitement was provided by Mme. Louise Weiss, suffragist leader, who was arrested for throwing powder into the eyes of a police sergeant who tried to move her from her stand before a voting booth.

Premier Flandin was reelected mayor of his home town of D'Amecy Sur Cure by a vote of 98 to 11.

Pierre Laval, foreign minister, whose reelection to the municipal council of Aubervilliers was threatened by Communists, also won by a large majority.

Boy Target Shooter Kills Young Sister

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 5.—Geraldine Elizabeth Lanter, 10, was accidentally killed today in the kitchen of her home by a bullet from a rifle fired by her 12-year-old brother from the yard. The bullet passed through the weather boarding and plastering before striking the child.

Firemen Enter Election Fight At Mt. Rainier

Department Assails Tax Stand of Mathias on Eve of Vote.

The Mount Rainier Volunteer Fire Department entered the heated mayoralty contest between Mayor Norman A. Pruitt, seeking re-election, and former Councilman Floyd B. Mathias, over the week-end with the circulation of a letter to the citizens which indirectly attacks the Mathias cnadidacy.

While the letter failed to mention the name of Mathias, a majority of the members of the fire department, as citizens, have been actively campaigning for the re-election of Mayor Pruitt for several weeks.

The letter charges the former councilman with favoring a reduction in the town's special fire levy, which is 9 cents on the $100 assessed valuation of property.

"It has been stated by a candidate and on behalf of a candidate for public office in the coming election," the letter reads, "that if elected the fire tax will be drastically reduced, thereby impairing the efficiency of the department and the protection afforded you, resulting in an inevitable increase in the fire insurance rates."

Financial Charge Answered.

In answer to alleged charges by Mathias that the fire department had failed to make proper reports regarding its finances to the town authorities the letter states:

"The statement has emanated and circulated from the same source that semiannual reports as required by law, have not been made to the mayor and council showing complete, itemized expenditures by the department. The falsity of this statement can be easily ascertained by calling at the town hall, where the reports are on file."

The fire department became an issue in the campaign several weeks ago when plans were announced by the fire unit to purchase a new truck at an estimated cost of $10,000. At that time the plans were made public at a meeting of the town officials, who passed resolutions commending the fire department on the efficient work and progressive spirit.

Immediately supporters of Mathias charged that by their action the town officials had saddled this debt upon the backs of the town's taxpayers. In reply, the officials, as well as the firemen, pointed out that the municipal government has no jurisdiction over the volunteer fire department, which is a privately operated organization.

In telling citizens of the proposed purchase the letter states:

"We can purchase this new apparatus out of the present tax rate without additional expense to the taxpayers," and then goes on to cite cases throughout the county where fire units had purchased apparatus and have been forced to levy additional and special assessments in order to pay for them.

The letter is signed by Karl A. Young, chief, and his staff, including William S. Freeman, deputy chief; Bernard Beall, captain; James W. Mezzanotte, Lieut. and Simon Lebowitz, sergeant.

1,900 Voters Eligible.

Approximately 1,900 voters are eligible to participate in today's municipal election and the heaviest vote in the town's history is expected. The polls will be open from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. D. J. Orcutt and Mrs. Elizabeth Laughton will be judges with Ira Widemier and Mrs. Lettia Plumer clerks.

In the council contests all incumbents seek re-election while the chief interest centers in the second and fourth wards where Councilmen Roy Fowkes and Rexford Worley are facing stiff operation. In the Second Ward Fowkes is opposed by ormer Councilman John T. Duever who was elected to that office last year but was ousted last November because of an alleged election law violation.

Rexford Worley, the present council member from the Fourth Ward, is in danger of losing his seat to his opponent Carl Herberger, who has the backing of a strong political organization in that area.

Medley to Bid For Re-Election To Legislature

Arlington Delegate Files Notice; Orr Denies He's Board Candidate.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

William D. Medley, of Clarendon, announces his candidacy for re-election as Arlington County's delegate to the General Assembly of Virginia, subject to the Democratic primary, August 6.

In announcing his candidacy for re-election he says:

"During my first term as the county's delegate, during the session of 1934, I favored and worked for the passage of the bill which provided increased appropriation by the State, guaranteeing increased salaries for teachers and eight months' school term and the act reducing the price of automobile license plates. Arlington County to proceed speedily with installation of its county-wide condemnation proceedings for rights of way for trunk lines.

"I at all times during my first term endeavored to the best of my ability to serve the best interests of the people of Arlington County and shall continue to do so if re-elected."

Denying his reports of his candidacy for the county board, Arthur Orr, president of the Arlington County Civic Federation, issues the following statement:

"Several weeks ago a report was current throughout the county referring to me as among those mentioned as possible candidates for the county board. I attached no significance to the report and had intended to ignore it. However, I am one of the members of a special committee of the Civic Federation appointed to recommend what steps, if any, shall be taken to meet the possible emergency of an excessive number of candidates for county offices, and the propriety of my serving on that committee while there is any possibility of my being a candidate has been called in question.

"I am, therefore, constrained to announce that the circumstances of my regular employment render it impracticable for me to consider service on the board, even though I should be fortunate enough to receive a sufficient number of votes to be elected.

"I shall, therefore, not be a candidate for the board or any other county office."

The Rosslyn Precinct Civic League at its meeting Friday night will afford the candidates for the Democratic nomination for the office of Commonwealth attorney their first public appearance, according to an announcement yesterday by President Dr. Victor Myers. The meeting will be held in the Woodrow Wilson School auditorium at Fort Myer Heights.

Among the speakers will be Lawrence W. Douglas, incumbent, Emery N. Hosmer and John Paul Jones.

The Ladies Aid Society of Walker's Chapel will serve a benefit chicken supper tomorrow from 5 to 8 p. m. in the chapel.

Dinwiddie Dies While Starting New Dry Fight

TemperanceChief Stricken Soon After Repeal; Rites Today.

Dr. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, superintendent of the National Temperance Bureau, United Lutheran minister, and nationally known temperance advocate, died yesterday morning at his home following a long illness. He was 68 years of age and death possibly was hastened by his crushing disappointment at the repeal of prohibition.

Dr. Dinwiddie came to Washington in 1900, being the first individual to assume the position as a legislative agent in the cause of prohibition, and his career since that time had been a long fight for the same principle.

The repeal of national prohibition, seemingly sweeping away the fruits of his life work, was a severe blow to him, and last July he was stricken with a heart attack from which he never recovered. After several months, he was able to resume a measure of his former activity, but in December he suffered a relapse. Almost to the end of his life he hoped and planned for a program of revival of temperance.

His work in the national temperance field began in 1899, when he established the headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League of America in the Bliss Building, and he remained with that organization for several years. His first point of attack was the beer and liquor hall in the Army canteens, and it was at his insistence that the bill which finally became law and banished the so-called "saloon" from the Army canteens and reservations was passed. This was in 1901, and from that time on he had a leading part in campaigning for more than 30 temperance measures which finally brought enactment of the eighteenth amendment and the subsequent passage of the enforcement act.

Broke With League.

In 1905 the National Temperance Bureau was founded, following disagreements between Dr. Dinwiddie and other controlling members of the Antisaloon League. The Temperance Bureau banded several Nation-wide organizations interested in the banishment of the saloon, and he was made superintendent, a post which he had since held.

Although he was a minister in the United Lutheran Church, he had never held a pastorate, giving all his time to fighting drink. His ordination took place in 1894, and in 1922 his alma mater, Wittenberg College, conferred upon him the degree of doctor of divinity.

A descendant of an old Scotch family from Dumfrieshire, he was the son of the late John Andrew and Edith J. Dinwiddie, of Greene County, Ohio. He was educated in the public schools of Springfield, Ohio, Grove City College, and later Wittenberg College, in Springfield.

Honored by Harding.

He married Miss Olive H. Smith, of Selma, Clark County, Ohio, in 1894. Mrs. Dinwiddie, a son, Horace M. Dinwiddie, of Irvington, N. J., and a daughter, Mrs. Samuel R. Painter, of this city, survive.

President Harding, in 1923, appointed Dr. Dinwiddie a delegate to the seventeenth international congress against alcoholism at Copenhagen, and he was also a delegate to the thirteenth congress at The Hague, the fourteenth at Milan and the sixteenth in Lausanne. He was president of the fifteenth congress, which was held in Washington in 1920 under the auspices of the State Department.

He was national chief templar of the International Order of Good Templars, a member of the United Lutheran committee on moral and social welfare, the City Club of Washington, Beta Theta Pi Fraternity, the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association and the author of numerous pamphlets and booklets on temperance and peace.

Funeral services will be held at the family residence, 1802 Lamont street northwest, this afternoon at 2 p. m. Dr. H. W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, will officiate. Burial will take place tomorrow in Springfield, Ohio.

5-10 Heiress Waits 10-Minute Divorce

By the Associated Press.

Reno, Nev., May 5.—Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani expects one of Reno's 10-minute trials to be sufficient for her divorce action against Prince Alexis, it was learned today.

Reliable information that only formal filing of the complaint and a brief hearing behind locked doors remain to separate the Woolworth "five-and-ten" heiress from her polo playing prince came from a source close to Barbara.

It was said Alexis already has consented to the divorce plans and will not offer a contest; that he will be represented by an unnamed Reno attorney, and that all his differences with the famous princess already have been amicably adjusted by attorneys.

It appeared most likely the princess would rely on the usual charge of "extreme cruelty," which may be either mental or physical.

James A. McQuade Dies at New York

Political Leader Succumbs to Heart Illness.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5.—James A. McQuade, 56, former sheriff and register of Kings County and Brooklyn political leader for 30 years, died today of a heart ailment after a short illness.

During the Seabury investigation in 1931 McQuade testified that although he received a $12,000 a year salary he had bank deposits of $510,597, of which $200,000 had been deposited in 1925 and 1926. He explained he had borrowed the money to enable him to support "30 starving little McQuades."

McQuade retired from political work about two years ago after weathering several attempts to remove him from office. President Roosevelt, then Governor, refused requests of the city affairs committee to oust McQuade.

The committee charged that McQuade "failed to give a satisfactory and credible explanation of large bank deposits in excess of his salary."

McQuade, a bachelor, is survived by three sisters.

Wallace Invades Long's Bailiwick

Secretary to Talk at City Which 'Egged' Senator.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, May 9.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, one of the stanchest knights of the New Deal, will invade Senator Huey Long's private stamping grounds this week to tell the farmers the good points of President Roosevelt's agricultural program.

The speech will be made Saturday at Alexandria, only a few miles from Winnfield, where Huey Long was born. Alexandria is distinguished as the first city in Louisiana where Long abolished home rule. He ousted the city administration with a dictatorship law because, in a political speech two years ago, the ungrateful natives showered him with stink bombs and rotten eggs there.

The subject of Wallace's address will be strictly nonpolitical, but it will be the first time any spokesman for the New Deal has had an opportunity to give Long's subjects a first-hand account of what the Federal Government is doing for them.

Pastor Avows Evil Is Source Of Perfection

Rev. Loughran Finds Misery Caused by Working of Natural Laws.

Evil and misery are present in the world to give man incentive for character building, the Rev. Joseph S. Loughran, pastor of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, explained in his sermon yesterday morning.

The pastor, who came here recently from studies at Oxford, England, and Freiburg, Germany, was discussing the "Problem of Evil."

"Why is there so much pain and suffering in the world, if at the heart of it there is an eternal goodness?" he asked.

"First, there is no possibility of a universe of law without evil. Evil is the natural accompaniment of a world of inflexible law. When people condemn the so-called indifference of nature, what they really condemn is the reign of law. If we rejoice in a perfectly ordered universe, we must be willing to accept all the consequences that this principle implies.

"Secondly, if there be no evil in the world, then there is no possibility of character. Effort, sacrifice, courage—these make a soul. Let all be smooth, and we have nothing to win, nothing to achieve.

Evil goes deep into the nature of a moral being. A moral being is first a responsible being, or else there would be no justification for praise or blame. The educational value of life is that it provides a sphere where a man can develop a personality, wage a moral warfare and lay hold of eternal life.

If evil, then, is a source of perfection in man, it can not be inconsistent in God, as a moral being, to permit it.

Spring Speaks Creed Of Christ, Pastor Says

speaks for the triumph of Christi- speaks for the triumph of Chirstianity, the Rev. Freeley Rohrer said yesterday when he preached on "A Springtime Religion" before his congregation in Metropolitan Presbyterian Church.

"Spring makes an appeal that surpasses all other seasons," said the pastor. It persuades everybody and moves every spirit. Youth and age alike respond.

"The vigor of the springtime challenges strength and life for their best. The call is to new life. 'Be strong in the Lord and the power of His might.' The spiritual life throbs when we hearken to the voice of the Spirit.

"Springtime appeals to the most beautiful things. So art and music help the heart to realize the deepest experiences of communion with the Divine. * * * The artistic must not swallow up the religious and supercede the spiritual. Paul says, 'Bring into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ.'

"The love of nature is not the love of Christ. But the voices of nature may bend us in reverence to the Creator of all; the brooks and breezes and boughs may move our hearts to gentleness and loveliness to others."

Surviving are two sisters and three brothers, Mrs. Wilmer B. Simmerman, Maj. C. Walter Hoover, Mrs. James Whitehead Jackman and Capt. Frank W. Hoover, of Washington, and Roy C. Hoover, of Atlantic City, N. J.

Good-Will on A Milk Diet

The milk business is as rich in human nature as it is in vitamins.

Its value cannot be measured by the net worth of its physical assets.

It grows by satisfying more and more people.

As it gains dimension, the item of good-will becomes its most important asset.

The esteem of the public is the prize for which the milkman daily strives. He knows it is not to be won in a day.

Happily, the public itself confirms his far-reaching hold on its good-will by deliberately becoming a beneficiary of his service.

If that is monopoly, it signifies the sort of trust that does not come within the meaning of the Sherman law.

No corporate milkman prospers unless he is as much the dispenser of the milk of human kindness as of his own stock in trade.

The "good-will" which appears on the company's balance sheet is only the reflection of the qualities which make the milk business human, difficult, and worth while.

GENE SARAZEN, championship golfer, who has smoked Camels for years

The mild cigarette the athletes smoke is the mild cigarette for YOU!

A cigarette so mild you can smoke all you want—that's what athletes say about Camels. And when a champion talks about "condition"—"wind"—healthy nerves—real tobacco mildness—he's got to know.

Gene Sarazen says: "Playing as much as I do—I have to keep in condition. I smoke Camels steadily. They are so mild they never get my 'wind'—never upset my nerves."

Other athletes back him up...."I smoke all the Camels I want, and keep in top condition," says Mel Ott, slugger of the New York Giants....Georgia Coleman, Olympic diver, says: "Camels don't cut down on my 'wind.'"...Bill Miller, oarsman; Jim Lancaster, N. Y. U.'s 1934 basketball captain; John Skillman, pro squash racquets champion—hundreds of sports stars smoke Camels regularly and report that Camels never get their "wind" or nerves.

What this mildness means to you!...It means you can smoke Camels all you want! Athletes have made this discovery: Camel's costlier tobaccos are so mild, they can smoke all they please, without disturbing their "wind" or nerves.

HEALTHY NERVES, "WIND," ENERGY—Condition is important to you—on vacation, in the office, at home. You can keep "in condition," yet smoke all you please. Athletes say: "Camels never get your wind."

Not Yet Hopeless.

There is a note of resignation in the words of William T. Stone, of the Foreign Policy Association, with which it is difficult to agree. He declared before the Teachers Union of Washington that to his mind war is inevitable and the United States must be drawn into it. No realistic observer will deny that the gathering clouds are ominous. But the storm has not yet struck, and a great deal can be done to avert it.

Mr. Stone sees the United States as faced with two alternatives, neither of which affords much hope for the maintenance of peace. The first is to continue the naval program in an effort to protect our commerce on the high seas, come what may. This, he submits, will lead the United States directly into any major war that breaks out. Belligerent nations will be forced to raid American commerce to cut off their opponents' resources and the Navy will thus be drawn into battle. The history of 1914-17 bears this out.

On the other hand, a strong movement is now under way to formulate a neutrality policy under which trade with belligerents would be curtailed to avoid hostile acts that might lead to war. Mr. Stone is persuaded that the American people will not be willing to pay such a price. It is quite proper that the potential sacrifice involved in a neutrality policy be fully recognized. But recognition of the obstacles that will be encountered certainly would not justify abandonment of efforts to preserve peace in this way.

No absolute guaranty of peace is known. The most stringent neutrality policy might break down under the stress of another world war. On the other hand, determined preparation to maintain peace in the United States regardless of possible hostilities in Europe or Asia may prevent wanton spilling of blood so far as this country is concerned. The possibility of failure in a matter of such great importance certainly should not discourage any reasonable effort to guard against war.

Government Dumping.

It is easy to detect the shortcomings of the cotton processing tax. To devise any practical farm aid to replace it, however, is a task which only imaginative theorists seem willing to assume.

Oscar Johnston, manager of the AAA cotton pool, has returned from a survey of potential European markets for American cotton with a gloomy report of tendencies to restrict international trade. But the opportunists, who believe that the Government owes the farmer a living, go right ahead with plans to force their goods upon the foreign market through Government bounties.

It is true that existing prices, plus the taxes levied by the AAA, are narrowing the market for cotton and its products. One witness before the President's textile committee declared that 71 mills have been forced to close during the last eight months, depriving 21,000 men and women of their jobs. But farmers are not willing to forgo acreage reduction benefits or artificially pegged prices to stimulate production of cotton goods. Consequently, it is suggested that direct bounties be substituted for the processing tax.

A scheme of this kind was urged upon the textile investigating committee by Donald Comer, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association. He would draw upon the Treasury for funds to reward exporters (presumably both cotton farmers and textile manufacturers) for shipping a certain portion of their output abroad. In other words, the Government is asked to engage in systematic dumping. Cotton manufacturers are vociferously protesting against the importation of textiles from Japan at prices which they can not meet. Yet they do not hesitate to promote a dumping policy for their own benefit, with the use of Government funds. There is no evidence that the Japanese have gone to such unfair extremes to foster their international trade in textile goods.

Secretary Hull is carrying on a heroic struggle to eliminate discriminatory trade practices. Against great odds he is trying to extend the traditional American policy of equal treatment for all nations. If the United States should embark upon an export dumping program for the benefit of a special industry while the State Department is thus trying to abolish unfair international trade practices the reciprocal negotiations of the last two years would become a tragicomedy.

Regardless of how difficult its problem may be, the textile committee ought to turn sharply away from any and all nostrums based on Government dumping.

The Jubilee.

On the sixth of May, 1910, George Frederick Ernest Albert, of that House of Saxe-Coburg Gotha which was so soon to become the House of Windsor, succeeded to the British throne. Today the British Empire celebrates his Silver Jubilee: the conclusion of 25 years more momentous than any quarter century in England's history since the one between John Hampden's stand against the ship-money and the restoration of the Stuarts.

A popular King, master politician at home, master diplomat abroad, had just died. His successor, the second son of Edward VII, was almost unknown to his subjects, and the horizon was crowded with clouds. Symbolized by the very oath administered to the new monarch—a significant abbreviation of his predecessors'—fundamental changes were shaping for the British Constitution; memorable customs, age-old institutions, were being undermined.

A strong Liberal majority assured passage of a measure which, providing for the making of laws without approval by the Upper House, promised to shear the Lords of their power. Suffragists were rioting for the franchise. Syndicalism had invaded the trades-unions. Ireland was dividing into two armed camps. Doubt assailed the Entente Cordiale with France, and relations with Germany were dangerously strained.

Allowing for all those limitations with which a constitutional monarchy hedges its monarch, people asked how would this almost unknown George, whose name was not symbolic of wise leadership, meet the test ahead? His character had been long since formed. From 1877 until 1903, he was a simple sailor, educated in the Royal Naval College at Greenwich, passing through the gunnery and torpedo schools to the eventual command of a battleship. He was within a few weeks of 45, he was not anxious for the responsibilities of kingship, and he was not particularly trained for the unwanted duties which unexpectedly devolved upon him.

Scarcely had the brief oath been taken before the storm of change intensified. There was the great railway strike of 1911, the fight over Welsh Disestablishment, the increasing tension in Ireland, the great changes signalized by the introduction of Lloyd George's social security program. Then came the World War, and all the tangled problems of the years which have succeeded. Of the quarter century of the king's reign only four years have been in that relatively tranquil period we call "prewar" today. During that quarter century eight nations—Germany, Russia, Austria, Spain, Turkey, Portugal, China and Greece—have overthrown their monarchies. But the throne of George V has never once been threatened.

Throughout the war this King, by self-denial and visitation, made common cause with his people afloat and in the trenches, at the meager table, the hospitals, shipyards, munition factories. By his simplicity, his integrity and his essential democracy he has steadily grown closer to his people. As, in the deadlock of the 1914 Buckingham Palace conference on the Irish imbroglio, he demonstrated the value of a monarch aloof from factional strife, so has he since demonstrated it, during each of these troublous 25 years.

Amid such turmoil any King could lose his head—at least metaphorically—and so might lose his crown. He could easily lose the love of his people. But George V of Britain kept the first two of these possessions and gained and held the third. He has shown modesty without weakness, leadership tempered by tact. And, while other thrones crumbled, he has enthroned himself in the hearts of his subjects throughout a mighty, far-flung empire. He has filled a hard job so well that even the citizens of a republic can, and today do, gladly align themselves with the throng in London which is crying:

"God Save the King!"

Administrative Lawmaking.

The questions asked by the justices of the Supreme Court during the hearings on the Schechter poultry case indicate that the major issue involved is whether Congress has delegated undue discretionary powers to the executive branch of Government under the recovery act. If the decision on this point should be in the affirmative, it would of course necessitate a complete revision and rewriting of the present law.

The line of demarcation between what constitutes a reasonable and an excessive delegation of power by the legislative branch of Government can not be exactly defined. But critics assert that the freedom given the President under the NRA to establish any kind of administrative agency he chooses, and formulate policies without the benefit of legislative guidance, is unprecedented.

It would be impossible as well as highly undesirable for Congress to specify in detail the methods to be followed in suppressing unfair competition. It was compelled to delegate the promulgation of "recovery" rules and regulations to an administrative agency. Nevertheless, the legislative branch of Government is charged with an obligation to lay down certain specific principles and general lines of policy to be followed by the administrative body, or the official designated to act as its agent. The recovery act does not really provide such guidance, although under it hundreds of codes have been adopted, fixing wages and hours for a large proportion of the workers of the country, controlling production and prices, and giving the force of law to an intricate body of trade practices.

These codes, and the thousands of orders issued under them, constitute a body of administrative law which has been the outcome of opportunistic official practices and bargaining by interested groups. Nearly all of the regulatory legislation passed since the present Administration came into power has been characterized by a looseness of phrasing and a lack of clearly defined objectives. In case of the recovery act, however, the delegation of authority has been so great as to direct attention to the serious consequences of building up a huge body of administrative law without the benefit of clear legislative definitions of the objectives aimed at and the policies to be pursued.

Official Propaganda.

Propaganda—when it is adverse to the New Deal—is one of the chief aversions of the present Administration. On several occasions the President has denounced the propagandists seeking to thwart his objectives. The power companies especially have been rebuked for wasting investors' money in a fight against the Wheeler-Rayburn bill.

Last week Postmaster General Farley brought a similar indictment against shipping companies that have obtained mail contracts from the Government. Instead of using funds thus obtained to repay loans, he charges, many ocean mail carriers have "employed lobbyists and special representatives at enormous fees." Mr. Farley is properly indignant to find that some of the money appropriated by Congress to foster the American merchant marine has trickled back to Washington through the channels of propaganda.

This particular accusation is incidental, of course, to the Postmaster General's broad denunciation of the present method of subsidizing American merchant vessels. If Mr. Farley had merely intended to expose the insidious work of the propagandists, it would not have been necessary for him to go so far afield. He could have found a veritable regiment of publicity agents on the Government's pay roll.

Propaganda unquestionably distorts issues before the public and hampers efficient operation of representative government. It is especially distasteful when issued by groups directly benefiting from Treasury funds. What, then, can be said for the propaganda which is disseminated by the Government itself? The number of publicity bureaus operating in Washington is estimated from 53 to 100. They turn out tons of press releases, speeches, statements and reports every month. While some of the older bureaus still attempt to let facts speak for themselves, a large proportion of this "information" is carefully designed to magnify the achievements of the New Deal or to minimize its failures.

One investigator is convinced that much of this official propaganda is illegal. John Stewart Bryan, president of William and Mary College, has called attention to a 22-year-old statute forbidding the use of Federal funds to pay publicity experts unless specifically appropriated for that purpose. When Mr. Farley has stopped the diversion of shipping subsidies into the pockets of propagandists, his reforming zeal might well be employed against the numerous alphabetical agencies which are using funds designed to aid recovery for the purpose of developing public opinion favorable to their own cause.

Mrs. Coolidge's Bob.

It isn't often, especially in these times, when the bobbing of a lady's hair merits any particular notice, either from the press or the country at large. Irene Castle was probably the first to find herself in headlines when she parted with her tresses. But that was at the beginning of the World War and the phrase "this freedom" for women had not yet been coined. The post-war flapper's masculine haircut was as indicative of her new independence as cigarettes and flask-toting. Within a few years it was the woman with long hair who was distinctive.

Then "America's Sweetheart" hied herself to a barber shop and wept as her golden trade-mark fell to the floor in long curls. Mary Pickford announced that this was her first step toward outgrowing childish roles on the screen and assuming her rightful place as an adult. But like Samson, she lost most of her strength with the public when she sheared for art's sake.

Now, after much furore in the newspapers several years ago on the subject, Grace Coolidge has bobbed her hair. No motive is ascribed for her decision, but it is safe to say that neither Miss Castle's nor Miss Pickford's reasons suffice in this case. At any rate, the deed is done, though it is said the change is hardly discernible because her hair is so perfectly groomed. Trust Mrs. Coolidge to do a job gracefully and thoroughly, leaving no loose ends about. That quality is but one of the many which so endeared her to the American people that the mere cutting of her hair is news.

Tuskegee's New Chieftain.

From the Montgomery Advertiser.

The new president of Tuskegee Institute, Dr. Frederick Douglass Patterson, bursts suddenly into the picture and catches the average newspaper unprepared to give a full account of the merits which were sufficiently numerous to turn the attention of the board of trustees in the end to him and lead the board to invest him with the most responsible position that any Negro in the United States can hold.

He is young, being yet in his thirties—and this must have been a decisive factor in the consideration of his name—he is a specialist in rural economics; he is Southern; he is soundly educated; he has executive capacity; he has been long enough on the staff.

He knows his race; he knows the white race. He understands the peculiar nature of his mission as the leader of the greatest cultural establishment for Negroes on earth which happens to be located in a black-belt town in the deep South.

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The ediotrs of The Post wish to make full acknowledgment of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

New Deal Frogs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Plenty of signs indicate that we little folks are getting tired of living in giant land. For more than two years we have had a superabundance of instruction in economics and altruism, illustrated by destruction of food we might have eaten, of money we might have foolishly spent on ourselves instead of saving the life of the fellow who now needs the destroyed food.

Worst of all—we have become too familiar with the pictured faces of those who so vociferously assured us that they alone had the ability to lead us out of the miseries of 1929-32. It can not be denied that these leaders tried their best to become giants—to swell up to the dimensions of their magnified voices as enlarged by the radio and sound machines—but they forgot that even the unlettered have a natural ability to estimate character by facial markings—and the faces of the leaders of the past two years are as unfortunately mediocre as their remedies are ineffective. Why did they forget to get a surgeon to plow in those lines which make us love the homely face of Lincoln because of its easily read honesty, truthfulness and sincere desire to serve his fellow men.

Aesop's fable of the frog and the ox comes to mind. Have the New Dealers stretched their skins to the utmost? Will they now exhale—or burst? Will the giants of the radio, loud speakers; the supermen from whose supposed pens flowed such a torrent of books and pamphlets deflate—or will they attempt the dangerous device of more inflation of their cracking hides?

"Outrageous Arrest."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Recently I took a doctor, who is serving for the Government, to hear Prof. Bragg speak at the Masonic Temple upon "South Sea Secrets of Keeping Healthy at Any Age." Four sturdy South Sea men gave some music beforehand. At the starting time for the lecture, Prof. Bragg's secretary announced that he had been arrested, for "practicing medicine" and would be unable to appear!

As I happen to know, Prof. Bragg does not practice medicine in any shape or form. His arrest was an outrage, and shows how intolerance will prohibit free speech and free press at every opportunity. Only the other day Secretary Ickes was quoted in The Post as saying that free speech and free press should not be curtailed in this country.

"Another Little Drink——"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I note that Mr. Morgenthau contends that an increase in taxes will be necessary if any bonus bill is paid. To my mind, there is no reason for bonus payment to increase taxes, especially not the Patman bill, which calls for an increase in currency, without bankers' interest.

Probably the President's various bills have occasioned a condition necessitating an increase in taxes and the Administration seeks to camouflage the cause by blaming the veterans; anyone with a grain of sense realizes that if bonds can be issued for $5,000,000,000 without increased taxes, the same applies to a $2,000,000,000 bonus bill for the much-maligned veteran.

Much has been made of the fact that the Patman bill means inflation. The people have been taught by editors, economists, financiers and other propagandists that the word "inflation" is synonymous with the word "ruin." This is wrong because anything can be inflated to equal 100 per cent of its capacity without any disastrous effects.

If, after normal inflation, commodity cost increases and the value of money decreases, it is due to crooked financial manipulators and not inflation. I challenge The Post to refute this and to write an editorial containing the truth about inflation, taking into consideration that we are not on the gold standard and that our resources are the element of credit. Tunnels At Circles?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

During the spring and summer months the influx of visitors who drive their own cars greatly increases the burden which the city's streets must carry.

The "circles" are particularly bad examples of congestion, and traffic is obliged to move through these points at a snail's pace at the rush hours. Many suggestions have already been made to hasten transportation while at the same time cut down the Capital's high accident rate. I hope the District Commissioners have given consideration to the following plan, viz.: to build tunnels under Thomas and Dupont Circles for the use of north and south bound motor vehicles.

The construction of such underground passages at the strategic points mentioned would surely improve traffic conditions, and could be financed, I believe, with an appropriation under the new work-relief act. GUY D'AULBY.

America's Demands.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the manner that hay in the barn loft testifies to the ability of the animal below to provide for itself, so consumption of a laborer in a communistic state testifies to the ability of the laborer to provide for himself.

Even a dog can plead for a higher standard of living, economic security, kindness from its master, humanity for its kind—yet in a communistic state, it is presumed that a laborer asks for no more.

But there is no cause for fear that the truly American laborer will ever cease demanding a stand in the man's game of life; freedom to look after the man that he is; rights relevant to a capitalist; the application in his case of common justice or justice no more or no less than the justice applicable to the case of any other American.

MARY A. GRANT.
Sparta, Ill., April 25.

Voice From Louisiana.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"God helps those who helps themselves" is a phrase one often hears in our beloved country. The depression was almost permanent when a grand idea—charity—spurred our President to obstruct uncharitableness by charity, by helping unemployed and disabled with shelter, food and work until they are able to help themselves.

The President's charity, finding an echo in the grand body of Senators, will make good ones still better, reforming the uncharitable, out of which Uncle Sam may lead the world to peaceful progress. Good times are coming through high ideals. In neutralizing error, psychologists say, error sometimes attacks you. This means the ridiculous contradictions to Federal help; but sooner or later error will be reformed.

There is certainly more sense in letting charity be dispensed by the author of Federal help than by individual States that did not originate the idea. Even admitting that some selfishness on the part of some subordinates is unavoidable, the good result will surely be achieved.

Lynching Remedy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Lynching is without question one of the most brutal forms of mob criminality. It is an action of mob psychology in its most primitive, unreasoning form that strikes basically at the very foundation of orderly procedure and civilized processes. Nor is it true that only Negroes are lynched, but the chances of a Negro being lynched are much greater than those of a white man.

Those who oppose the Wagner-Costigan antilynching bill are doing so on other grounds than the basic civilized foundation of orderly and judicial procedure. This bill will be not only punitive, but will have a strong preventive and educational influence. Every American citizen has under the Constitution certain rights and privileges and the courts have the power and duty of protecting them. But it is a notorious fact that the participants in this most brutal form of crime are rarely ever apprehended, much less punished. Where there is a clause at law, there should be a remedy.

We Feel Minuscule.

Says The Washington Post:

Man stands revealed in all his minuscule proportions before the ravages of uncontrollable natural forces.

Why did The Post, otherwise a correct and sensitive newspaper, use the word "minuscule?" We do not know what the circulation of The Post is, but we warrant that not more than 100 of its readers can define "minuscule" without reference to the dictionary.

It is rare that a newspaper is justified in sending more than 100 of its readers to the family dictionary.

The Post Impressionist

Post Office, Monday.

"SIR," writes a gentleman whose flowing signature might be "A. R. Darrah," and whose quite legibly appended address is 301 Clifton Terrace South: "The answer to the question in the last sentence of your Column on Horace is 'Two years.' The answer to Dr. Glover's is 'One year.'"

* * * *

Is Mr. Darrah—if he it be—right?

He is speaking anent the doubts we cast the other day in the mathematical propriety of a certain commemoration that is interesting the all too limited world of classical scholarship.

Under the patronage of Mussolini, and the direction of the Italian Academy—as you ought to remember—Italy will this year celebrate the 2000th anniversary of the birth of the poet Horace, who first saw the light at Venusia December 8, B. C. 65. The Horatian Society of England is helping, and the International Classical Association is expected to assist.

Apropos this, the Dr. Glover—classical lecturer at St. John's, Cambridge, wrote:

"Sixty-five plus 1935 equals 2,000, if arithmetic counts. But tell me how many years there were between 8th December, 1 B. C., and 8th December, 1 A. D. Do you add the ones? Might it not be just as wise to use subtraction? . . . How many years are there between 8th December, 65 B. C., and 8th December, 1935 A. D.?"

You see, Dr. Glover set, in effect, two problems, so Mr. Darrah's second answer is a trifle confusing. However, all we ourselves asked was: "How many years are there between 1 B. C. and 1 A. D.?" And Mr. D.'s opinion upon that point is as clear as it is emphatic.

Nor is Mr. Darrah's the only pen that has been moved by these inquiries. Our good contributor, Mr. Joseph Danziger, of 208 Massachusetts avenue northeast, declares:

"The matter of the Horatian 2000th anniversary is intriguing. For bringing it to public notice, we should be grateful to the Rev. Dr. the Hon. Terrot Reavely Glover. Not to be outdone by you, dear Mr. Post-Impressionist, I too must confess inability to wrestle with so abstruse a mathematical problem.

"The Chinese are better equipped for such a task, because of their superior educational methods. In late infancy, a well-born Chinese child begins his mathematical studies with differential calculus. As he approaches maturity, he is taking solid geometry, and by the time his scholastic training is completed he has reached up to the multiplication table. This accounts for the use of the abacus among Chinese business men whose education has not extended to the age of 21.

"It was but natural then that I turned, in this Horatian difficulty to my learned friend Wah Sin Tun, professor of inert introspection at Tombstone University, in Arizona. The professor's reply to my inquiry was somewhat troublesome to decipher, as his chirography is dissimilar from our crude Western writing. But I took his letter to another Oriental friend, Uon Long, a leader in the service of industry in our fair city, who kindly translated it for me.

"And here," continues Mr. Danziger, "is that translation!"

* * * *

It begins:

"The problem which your omniscient intellect has graciously deigned to submit to my feeble and incompetent reasoning powers is worthy of so stunted and irrational a brain as mine. I feel honored beyond my deserts that you should deign to consider the matter, simple as it is, within my weak powers of comprehension."

* * * *

And the erudite professor goes on:

"Because time is an abstraction, we try to conceive it in concrete terms. Thus a year begins at the infinitesimal instant between the last second of the old year and the first second of the new. A child is spoken of as being 2 years old, because he has completed his second year, although he may actually be well along toward his third. The forthcoming birthday of Horace—December 8, 1935—is therefore 1,935 years, 11 months, and 8 days since the beginning of your era.

* * * *

"In like manner, the years preceding your era are numbered by the completion of each year. So an event occurring Roman ides of March immediately preceding this era would be simply March 15, B. C. If it occurred a year earlier, it would be March 15, 1 B. C.

"Horace, then, was born 65 years and 23 days before this era. His birthday this year will occur 65 years and 23 days plus 1,935 years 11 months and 8 days after his birth—or 2,001 years since that celebrated event.

* * * *

"Correctly speaking, the celebration of the 2000th anniversary of Horace's birth should have been observed last year by the learned societies of Italy—not to mention the collaborating British Horatian Society and the International Classical Society."

* * * *

The debate is now open to all comers.

Along The Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

The Base Drummer.

WHEN the Shriners come here next month I want you to be sure to meet Jim, the bass drummer. There is a fellow who gave his mother and his wife a lot of trouble, but he has found himself. Jim shows his contentment in his face, in his every action, in every beat of the drum.

Gosh, I thought he would run us all nuts, though, before he settled down. Many's the time his mother or his wife, first one and then the other it would be—they'd call us and say, "I'm so worried about Jim, he's off again." They didn't mean he had gone off anywhere by "off." They just meant he was doing something which worried them, maybe it was drinking or maybe it was running around with another woman. Those of us who knew Jim knew this was just because he couldn't seem to find himself. He was not the fellow to do those things ordinarily.

* * * *

I suppose it was the war that made Jim restless. In France he was always living in the open of a shell-hole or traveling from one battlefield to another. It made him want to keep on the go all the time. Jim was right settled when he first came back from the war, though. He settled down to the business of making money, and this kept him occupied. This showed that Jim wanted to do right and that when his mind was occupied he would do right. But pretty soon Jim came to owning the leading cigar and soda water store in town. Money flowed in easily and Jim didn't have enough to do. This was when he started to giving his mother and wife lots of worry, not because he wanted to, but just because he was restless.

We said to him, we said: "Jim, you ought to get a hobby. That's what you need."

Well, Jim took up one hobby after another. First, it was bridge, then golf. Nothing seemed to satisfy him. First thing you'd know we'd hear Jim was running with the Widow So-and-so. When we would remonstrate with him he'd say:

"Aw, I know I oughtn't to do it, but life gets so monotonous."

* * * *

Then, so help me goodness, Jim went in for movements. He got up a movement to abolish war, he got up one to be kind to animals, he got up a movement to make the Allies pay their war debts. It was when he had the movement to be kind to animals that Mary—that is his wife—got off her best crack. Mary was sort of getting fed up with what she called Jim's foolishness. "It's a pity he can't be kind to his family," she said.

Howthesoever, Jim soon got tired of the movements. We were all about to give Jim up when they organized the local Shrine chapter and got up a band to go to the next convention. We said to Jim, we said: "Jim, you ought to join that band and go to the convention."

"What can I play," Jim said.

We said: "You can play the bass drum. Anybody can do that."

* * * *

Well, sir, I'll be darned if Jim didn't up and join the band. And after that Jim's life was downright pathetic. He stuck to it grimly but we all knew he was unhappy. Every time they would go to a convention Jim would go along toting the big bass drum. And at every station the train would stop en route the other fellows would say, "Come on, let's parade through the town." And off they'd go parading with Jim having to tote that big bass drum. He'd come back from every convention tired out. All the other fellows would sit around the cigar and soda water store telling about what a wonderful time they'd had, how they paraded in this place and paraded in that place, and Jim's only recollection would be how he had to tote that drum around.

Sometimes when the fellows would pile off the train to parade Jim would eagerly pile off with them. Then some fellow would notice he didn't have the bass drum and they'd all chorus: "Jim, you got to have that bass drum." And poor Jim would have to go back and get it. Gosh, we felt sorry for Jim in those days. He wanted to have a good time just as much as the other fellows.

Well, sir, we'd come to the belief that Jim wouldn't stand for this much longer when, lo and behold, science caught up with him. Some smart fellow invented a little two-wheeled contrivance on which the drum could be rolled around. You never saw such a change come over a fellow in all your life as then came over Jim. When you see him he will be the happiest man in the parade. He hasn't run around with a widow or got drunk in years. Mary says she would certainly like to write a testimonial for those two-wheeled carts. "They saved my home," she says. "Jim has certainly found himself at last."

Brookings NRA Survey Concludes Codes Have Retarded Recovery

Self-RegulationProgram Scored by Experts in New Book.

Analysis And Criticism Seen As Valuable By Reviewer.

By Anna P. Youngman.

THE Brookings Institution publishes today a book on "The National Recovery Administration," the joint work of Leverett S. Lyon, George Terborgh, Paul T. Homan, Lewis L. Lorwin, Charles L. Dearing and Leon C. Marshall. Dr. Marshall, now a member of the NRA Board, is said not to be responsible "for the expressions of judgment and appraisal which accompany the factual text."

Insertion in the Congressional Record of parts of the report in advance of the scheduled date of its publication led the Brookings Institution to announce its complete findings without delay, after Donald R. Richberg had characterized the entire book as "an intemperate emotional document in aid of a political attack."

Mr. Richberg has attempted to minimize the significance of the conclusion that the recovery act "has on the whole retarded recovery" by emphasizing the fact that the section summarizing the findings of the six experts who collaborated in producing the report was written by Dr. George Terborgh, a "virulent critic" of NRA. However, the conclusions reached are presented as a summation of the views that have been expressed in respect to varied aspects of the recovery program. Furthermore, they are supported by a mass of factual evidence and critical analysis which constitute a strong indictment of this experiment in industrial regimentation.

Dr. Terborgh's exposition of the basic flaws in the economic theories underlying the recovery program might have been written by any competent economist with a fair grasp of principles and a working knowledge of NRA. Its importance lies in the fact that the theoretical indictment is buttressed by evidence of the most varied type, supplied by experts discussing problems of administration, trade practices, hours and wages.

For the average reader the thoroughness of the survey will produce a feeling of bewilderment. Complications unsuspected by anyone who is not thoroughly familiar with the administrative mechanism of NRA are discussed at length. Questions of procedure and policy that few people know enough even to formulate are raised, although the investigators themselves frequently make no attempt to supply the answers.

* * * *

WHILE there are some positive recommendations scattered throughout the report, the findings are on the whole negative in character and reflect a definite bias against code practices that have tended to lessen competition. This bias, which Mr. Richberg refers to as "the definitely antagonistic preconceptions of all the collaborators" may have been in part the result of training. But anyone who examines the evidence must admit that the prejudice may have been the outgrowth of a study of the NRA in action.

There is manifest impatience with the experimental groping that has characterized the working methods of the NRA. The assumption is that the authorities should have defined their policies and made certain that they were in the public interest before they proceeded to act.

In discussing administrative organization and procedure, for instance, it is stated that the NRA chose to construct codes through the process of controversy between conflicting interests rather than by use of any predetermined formula or by reference to "uniform criteria." The results obtained by the process of bargaining to secure special advantages are evidently considered to be of more than dubious value to the community at large. Yet it seems very doubtful whether the method of approach apparently favored by the Brookings experts would have produced any noticeable results under the conditions prevailing when the NRA began to function.

VIEWED in restrospect, the mistakes and inadequacies of the opportunistic policies that have been followed to secure speed in code-making are easily recognized. But, after all, regulatory legislation in any new field has to be evolved. It does not spring ready-made from the creative minds of legislators. Consequently the makeshift administrative machinery as well as the makeshift and often non-enforceable code provisions have not been without value in the preliminary stages of development. Of course, the fact that the present study deals with the effect of the NRA upon recovery, instead of its potential value as a constructive reform agency, helped account for the rather harsh character of the judgment passed upon it. Many of those who believe that the NRA provides the basis for constructive reform of our industrial system deplore the emphasis placed upon the misguided methods employed to increase mass-purchasing power in the hope of hastening recovery.

The Brookings survey of administrative procedure undoubtedly warrants the conclusion that the scope of NRA and the range of its activities need to be curtailed if it is not to remain a "flagrantly ineffective" administrative agency. The only possible alternative, as indicated in the report, would be to build up an army of Federal policemen and officials.

Part V of the report, dealing with trade practice problems, is an especially valuable discussion of matters about which the average economist has little first-hand information. The difficulties of distinguishing between fair and unfair competition, the wide range and variety of trade practices and the various direct and indirect methods by which control over prices is brought about under the NRA are all discussed at length. The conclusion finally reached is that trade practice regulations "have achieved very little that may be regarded as socially useful." However, this opinion follows naturally from the doctrinaire assertion that, judged by standards of public interest, the desirability of given forms of economic organization must be weighed in terms of the production of the largest possible national income, the lowest possible cost in terms of resources and work and the widest freedom of individual choice of work.

OBVIOUSLY, price and production control devices, which are the chief objective of a large proportion of codified industries, would appear to be against the public interest as conceived in these terms. From the long-time point of view, and for the economic system as a whole, this conclusion seems valid. Nevertheless, it does not follow that all efforts to raise prices and restrict production in specified industries are necessarily detrimental. If such restrictions prevent demoralization of an industry, it may be that total production and employment for the country as a whole will be increased through a better allocation of productive resources in labor and capital.

To assert that the NRA lacks power to determine policies based upon sound social criteria, and to enforce them in voluntary codes, in effect constitutes a sweeping condemnation of the efforts to achieve industrial self-regulation within the framework of the existing NRA. In fact it is positively asserted that a policy-making body representing conflicting "pressure groups" is not consistent with sound public policy. It is recommended that control of trade practices should be in the hands of a commission appointed with the same care as members of the Supreme Court.

The section dealing with labor provisions of the codes criticizes the defective and arbitrary wage and hour structures established and presents a vast amount of valuable detail on the subject. The complaint is made that the Government has developed no permanent policy on wage and hour legislation and that a Government bureau continues to make and remake the body of such law.

"THERE is sufficient evidence," it is said, "to permit confident assertions that code agencies, except in exceptional cases, are unlikely to provide impartial and efficient administration of labor rules. Nor is the NRA now equipped to provide such administration. Administrative implementation involves the necessity of inspection and policing. For even a much simpler body of rules than those existing this would involve a great expansion of Federal organization, unless State governments were to take over the duties. The precise problem now before the country is that of establishing a permanent Federal policy in labor legislation. This involves congressional determination of the areas of control within which it is thought appropriate for the Federal Government to operate."

It is noticeable, however, that the rather pronounced emphasis upon avoidance of rigid price structures found in other sections of the report is not in evidence in the discussion of collective bargaining agreements. The question whether greater freedom and flexibility is to be preferred to collective contracts designed to achieve stability and balance is left open. But the advisability of transferring the formulation and maintenance of general labor policies to agencies outside the NRA is unequivocally affirmed.

The only logical deduction that can be drawn from the concluding observations of the investigations is that the NRA needs to be revolutionized instead of being reformed. It is true that certain necessary reforms are listed, such as the elimination of unworkable codes, strengthening of the compliance machinery, and reorganization of the NRA to "achieve continuity of policy and method."

* * * *

HARD upon the heels of these recommendations, however, follows an assertion that any attempt to carry out such reforms "in line with clearly determined public policy and to enforce such modified codes up to any reasonable standards of administrative efficiency" would probably precipitate a widespread collapse of the code system. It is further assumed that efforts to eliminate undesirable anti-social provisions from numerous codes which industrial groups regard as important would completely undermine the existing scheme of code administration and voluntary compliance upon which the system rests.

Despite these skeptical conclusions concerning the futility of attempts to correct the defects of the existing system, the report will repay close study by Congress. The facts which have been assembled, the careful analysis of data and the searching criticism of administrative procedure and practice could be turned to good account in reforming the NRA with a view to making it a permanent agency for regulation of industrial processes.

If Congress fully understood the nature of the experiment that it launched so light-heartedly, it would not now be preparing to revise it in such haphazard and partial fashion without taking time to study its deeper implications.

Appeals Court Denies Award Against Store

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md, May 5.—The court of appeals yesterday reversed the Circuit Court for Allegany County, in the case of Margaret Baker, of Hagerstown, against the Eyerly department store of that city and granted a new trial.

Mrs. Baker alleged she was injured while passing through one of the revolving doors of the store. She charged that one of the clerks rushed through the door and revolved it so rapidly that the plaintiff entering was caught in the door. The trial of the case occupied about two days and resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for $1,500.

King George

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

TODAY they are celebrating in England, with appropriate pomp and ceremony, and with universal and whole-hearted sincerity, the twenty-fifth anniversary of King George V, who succeeded his father, King Edward VII, on May 6, 1910.

All English-speaking nations should feel a certain pride and pleasure in this event.

* * * *

When I was a boy, I used to hear it commonly said that Victoria would be the last English monarch; that England was so democratic that when her reign was over the country would become a republic.

The fact is, of course, that while all absolute monarchs in Europe have been dethroned, and many kingdoms have changed their form of government, George V is firmer on the throne today than any previous British King in the last 800 years.

There is here a great lesson in moderation. When his father came to the throne in 1901, he did not call himself King Albert I, but King Edward VII, thus emphasizing continuity in the long history. By extraordinary tact which almost amounted to genius, King Edward exerted an enormous influence without apparently trying to exert any; and became the most popular man in the British Empire. These same qualities are characteristic of King George V and of his son, the Prince of Wales. Even advanced radicals in England do not wish the monarchy changed into any other form of government.

The present King is intensely and universally beloved; that is not too strong a word.

In the summer of 1928 in London we had the pleasure of attending the King's garden party; and when we returned to the hotel the man who ran the elevator asked us how we had spent the afternoon. I said, "We have just seen the King of England." The young man's face glowed with honest pride and affection. He said, "Then you have seen a man!"

No End of Books

The Restoration Of Williamsburg, In The Nicest Of Little Volumes; Do Writers Go To College?

By Theodore Hall.

IF you go down to Williamsburg, Va., you can see a whole town, from sidewalks and street lights to cupolas, restored after the fashion of the eighteenth century—a move to recapture the past which is probably equaled only by the restoration of Pompeii and Herculaneum. And to describe it and give the history of the place, now comes one of the most amiable little books I've ever laid my eyes on.

Bound in leather, with marbled end-leaves, and printed in the eighteenth century style (antique type and decorations; catchwords at the bottom of the pages; the use of long "s," like an "f," which makes you start to go fluffing through your teeth when you read it), it is a complete joy in appearance and feel. That is the first effect. But when you get into the text of "A Brief and True Report for the Traveler Concerning Williamsburg in Virginia," by authors remaining anonymous, you find the same gentle and beguiling antiquarian flavor.

Take merely this passage noting the impress of a nearby munitions factory during the Great War upon Williamsburg "As a result of these things, the Duke of Gloucester Street became a teeming Highway of Concrete; great Posts to carry Wires and Cables were raised on every Hand; the empty Spaces in Williamsburg, which were the Sites of forgotten Buildings and Gardens, began slowly to be filled with Shops and Stores, and with Stations for Gasoline. The old Houses and many of their Occupants resisted; but Williamsburg with the passing of the War stood upon the Brink of a poor Success in a world of vast Accomplishment."

FROM that banal and deadening fate Williamsburg was saved for the past by John D. Rockefeller's decision, in 1927, to restore the old grandeur. Some 442 buildings of modern, and deplorable, design were torn down; 64 colonial buildings were repaired and restored, and 84 structures, from the Governor's Palace down, were erected after the original plans on the original sites. And the town has become one of the most beautiful and impressive sights in the country.

No glossy-paper, four-color brochure could have taken us half so well into the atmosphere of the place as this "Brief and True Report," with maps and contemporary prints of the time. And belatedly, for price and publisher, let me quote the book's own advertisement at the foot of the title page: "Printed for the Authors on the Press of August Dietz and his Son in Cary Street at Richmond and sold at One and One-Half Dollar the Copy by certain Merchants, Apothecaries, Innkeepers and Others or sent by Post to Persons of Good Reputation and Credibility."

And have no fear that so charming a volume is marred by the pompously stodgy. Here is the envoi, signed R. G.:

"O Traveller—a word—the Book is done.
Praise be to our God, and praised the Son!
If you are wearied—pray don't regret it:
It's tired you far less than those that set it."

* * * *

THERE used to be a good old question going around—Should a would-be writer go to college? I wonder where it is now. What brings the matter up, and lends me a few points to go on, is a list of about 250 recent books by Harvard men which appears in the latest Harvard Alumni Bulletin. A list, mind you, only of such books as have come out since a like list was published on December 14 last. Returns from Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth or any other conspicuous university or college would be equally revealing.

Let's look over a few of the familiar titles, after noting that the range extends from Y. Fukukita's "Tea Cult of Japan: An Aesthetic Pastime" to A. E. Weir's "Pieces for Alto Saxophone." I'll put the authors in chronological order to show you when they sojourned in the land of the bean and the cod. Year alone means an A. B. degree; other degrees are self-explanatory; "Grad." means graduate student in years mentioned, and "Sp." means special student.

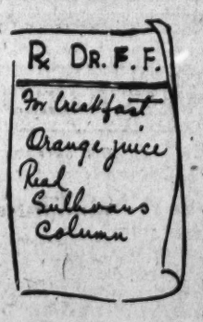
Henry Jones, who was sad and downcast for many years, is a happy man now. "It's this way," explains Hank. "It uster be when I got home I hadda eat outa cans or buy a hamburger down at Joe's hash-house. You see, the missus loved gossip and she spent her afternoons hangin' over the back fence tradin' scandal with the neighbors 'stead of gettin' supper.

"But I fixed that. I subscribed to The Washington Post and now she gets enough gossip outa that feller Ed Sullivan's Broadway column to last her all day. She says he sure knows how to tell things, all right."

But Ed Sullivan is not just a gossip-teller, a keyhole listener-inner, a Peeping Tom with a typewriter. Ed chronicles the doings of that biggest of all hick towns, New York. With Broadway and Forty-second street as his base of operations, Sullivan stops (briefly), looks (intently), and listens (long). The result is a column of news and gossip ... those little whispers which later roar at you from the front page headlines.

Another nice thing about Ed Sullivan's Broadway column is that it is written for the reader ... and not just to high-hat some other columnist. We know a college professor who once spent months translating what he termed "Broadwayese." For instance, he learned that "The Umphs who middle-aisled it Choosday yawning, phhht! yesdy. He's carrying the torch for a certain revusical eye-full now" really means that Mr. and Mrs. Umph, who were married last Tuesday, have parted, and that Mr. Umph is now in love with a chorus girl. But when you read Sullivan, you won't have to be a college professor to understand what he means ... for Sullivan's lines have sparkle, snap and wit ... and he doesn't depend upon a tortured pun to pack a wallop.



"Broadway," as seen through Ed Sullivan's slightly cynical but ever-interesting eyes, is as breezy as a cocktail party, as smart as a Noel Coward comedy, as entertaining as a ringside table. Not to read Ed Sullivan's column right after downing your orange juice each morning is to miss a lot of fun. Sullivan doesn't tell the news behind the headlines ... he tells the news ahead of the headlines ... and tells it five mornings each week in

Stories About the Pictures You're Seeing

Hollywood, May 5.

"THE SCOUNDREL." Ben Hecht and Charlie MacArthur with one of Hollywood's best cameramen, Lee Garmes, turned out this flicker in rather rapid shooting time and for the small cost of about $170,000 . . . The picture was inexpensive for many reasons: There weren't any large sets; the majority of the sets weren't any bigger than your dining room. There was only the price of the original story charged against it. There wasn't the additional cost of adaptation and many screen plays charged against it . . . The scenario of "The Scoundrel" was ready when the picture went into production, there wasn't any rewriting on the set for any scenario writers supplying a new page of dialogue as the director needed it . . . The cast, although it contained several names prominent in the ligitimate drama, was very inexpensive for the movies . . . Also, they were all anxious to help. Noel Coward, it is understood, received only $4,000 for his magnificent performance. He was anxious to see what he could do on the screen . . . Coward, while in Hollywood, was offered $200,000 for a picture.

* * * * *

Many characters in "The Scoundrel" bear strong resemblance to characters Hecht knew when he was bookish and frequented publishers' offices. The Noel Coward role points to the late Horace Liveright, the Julie Hayden character reminds one of Else Bartlett, and the poet played by Lionel Stander is supposed to be Maxwell Bodenheim . . . The same Bodenheim Hecht caricatured when he wrote "Count Bruga." Alexander Woollcott played Alexander Woollcott, the weepy town crier . . . One day Woollcott was due on the set at 9:30 in the morning. They finally located him at 4:30 in the afternoon. What did he have to say about holding up production? He just didn't feel like working that day.

* * * * *

WHO actually directed "The Scoundrel?" This was the working method employed. Hecht and MacArthur would hold a conference and discuss the script and a particular scene with the performers. Cameraman Garmes would be present. On the set they generally gave the actor or actress a little credit for knowing what to do . . . Noel Coward, when playing his scenes, would give suggestions. They were generally eagerly accepted. Coward didn't rewrite one line of his speeches but he did practically direct himself. Coward, a great stage director, would make a great screen director . . . It was Cameraman Garmes who gave the position orders. He told the actors where to stand and how far they could move. It was also Cameraman Garmes who yelled "Camera!" and also shouted when he wanted a scene to end.

* * * * *

The actors and actresses in "The Scoundrel" didn't use the usual make-up employed by the Hollywood actors and actresses. They wore just a usual street make-up . . . Cameraman Garmes gained his make-up effects by means of lights—he was practically a painter with lights . . . Another thing; there isn't a long shot in the entire picture. This is probably the only motion picture ever filmed without a long shot in it.

* * * * *

"THE DEVIL IS A WOMAN." Before this picture started, Director Josef von Sternberg announced it would be his last flicker with Marlene Dietrich. When the picture was completed, Von Sternberg and Dietrich weren't talking . . . Marlene recently returned from New York and a week later sought out Von Sternberg. She honestly doesn't believe that she can perform without him, and wants him to direct her new flicker, regardless of all stories and contracts to the contary . . . Von Sternberg took more than two months to shoot this picture and it cost over $800,000 . . . It was first called "Caprice Espagnol" and then "Carnival in Spain" before it was given the present intriguing title . . . Von Sternberg photographed every scene of the picture himself, doing all the manual labor at the camera with the exception of loading and unloading it . . . He refused to allow the assistant cameraman to slate the scene chart with numbers. The scene chart is photographed before a shot is taken and reads: "Von Sternberg—Scene 1—Take 1" and every scene and take is numbered to keep track of it.

* * * * *

Von Sternberg refused to have the takes numbered, claiming it wasn't any one's business but his own. For one quick scene in "The Scarlet Empress" he had 83 takes . . . Marlene Dietrich's husband, Rudolph Seiber, was on the set during the filming. Marlene never spoke to him on the set . . . She never dined with him in the commissary; occasionally Von Sternberg would take Seiber to lunch . . . Joel McCrea had the role now played by Cesar Romero . . . McCrea and Von Sternberg couldn't get along . . . One day Von Sternberg stopped shooting and asked McCrea how much he was getting a week. McCrea mentioned a sum around $2,000 and Von Sternberg remarked: "Would it be asking too much to get $2 worth of acting out of you for this scene?"

Grace Coolidge Has Hair Cut, But It's a Repeat

News From Northampton Recalls Like Story Here Several Years Ago.

Papers announced with excitement yesterday that Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, widow of the former President, had bobbed her hair. The news came from Northampton, Mass., where the former First Lady had recently returned from a trip in the South. The articles say that the change of coiffure escaped general observation because Mrs. Coolidge wears her hair so perfectly marceled that the change would not be readily apparent. Close scrutiny of a recently posed photograph revealed the bob.

However, the writer of this article finds in her files of several years ago an account of Mrs. Coolidge bobbing her hair, which reads as follows:

"Mrs. Calvin Coolidge has bobbed her hair! Which leads to the deduction that former President Coolidge has gone modern. For apparently the wall of opinion which endured for years between two of the most interesting figures of the land, has toppled before the onslaught of feminine persistence. For a long time the former Mistress of the White House wanted to shed her locks, and join the rapidly increasing contingent of sleek heads. But President Coolidge would have none of it.

"And now the die is cast and staid Vermonters near Plymouth, where the former President and Mrs. Coolidge have been passing a few weeks, are twiddling their thumbs in wonderment at the ways of modern women. Where, they are asking, will it all end?

"It has ended now, probably replies the charming Grace Coolidge. For, declare friends who have seen the results of a pair of sharp scissors, the new mode of hair dress is vastly becoming. No change in the general contour was effected, as Mrs. Coolidge wears her new bob brushed softly back from the forehead, following the style she favored while First Lady.

"Although Mrs. Coolidge is a strict advocate of the 'no advice—no argument' plan of married life, according to a recent interview by a notable journalist, she apparently adheres to the age-old custom of letting things slide until the one propitious moment. That moment came a few days ago, and presto! lovely, short locks and a smiling lady. And beside her smiling husband."

Whether or not Mrs. Coolidge has let her hair grow in the meantime, and again bobbed it only a few days ago, the reports of yesterday do not say.

Gay Sports Clothing Is Worn By Society at Warrenton Race

The Warrenton Gold Cup point-to-point race on Saturday afternoon which was held at Broadview, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Alex B. Hagner, was a very gay affair, with many members of Washington society driving to Warrenton to attend luncheon parties before the races.

Mrs. Hagner, the former Miss Caroline Roebling, was seen lunching with Mr. Tinsley Garnett and Mrs. Jano Fisher, jr. Mrs. Hagner wore a smart white sport coat over a shirtwaist dress and a dark brown felt hat with a brim, to shield her eyes from the sun, which was trimmed with a white band. Mr. Garnett wore a lightweight sweater under his smart checked coat. Mrs. Fisher chose a checked coat for the day and a small felt hat. Three well-known musicians from Washington played during the luncheon hour for Mrs. Hagner's guests.

The house, which sets on a hill, affords an excellent view of the race course, and the spectators may view each jump without having to change their position.

Others glimpsed eating luncheon in the tent of Broadview, were Mr. and Mrs. John Schiff, Mr. Jano Fisher, Miss Helen Wardman and Mr. John L. Newbold, and they drank a toast of good luck to Mr. Schiff, which was realized shortly after luncheon when Mr. Schiff's famous horse, Indigo, won the race. Mr. Schiff wore a lightweight wool suit for the occasion with a brown and tan sweater and a checked necktie, while Mrs. Schiff wore smart sports clothes with a wind jacket and a camel's hair polo coat thrown about her shoulders with a gay colored scarf around her neck and an off-the-face white hat. Mr. Fisher wore a black and white checked suit with matching accessories. Miss Wardman wore a smart herring bone suit with a dark sweater and a small hat, while Mr. Newbold wore a tan suit with matching accessories.

The Play.

West opened the heart six, and declarer, after a few moments of careful deliberation, made the most unusual play of going up with the Ace in dummy.

Reading the opening lead of the six-spot as a fourth-best, South applying the Rule of Eleven knew West had only one card higher and this card was probably the King or the Queen assuming these high honors to be split. Had West held the King-Queen, he probably would have opened the King rather than the fourth best.

Marking East with one of the high honors was only the first step. If the suit were divided 5-2, there would be no point to holding up the Ace to cut off the opponents' communications as the spade finesse had to be taken into the dangerous West hand.

After winning the heart Ace declarer led the spade ten and lost it to West's King. The defense was helpless. West, hoping to find his partner with three hearts, led a low one which East won with the Queen, but the latter could not put his partner back in the lead again.

Declarer made three spade tricks, a heart trick, three diamond tricks and two clubs, fulfilling his contract.

Comment.

Had South permitted the opening lead to ride around, East would have won with the Queen and returned the suit and then when West got in with the spade King, he could have run the setting tricks in hearts. South's play would work against any heart division except five to the King-Queen in the West hand and the ten-small held by East. With any other distribution the contract is fool-proof on South's line of play—eliminating, of course, the possibility of West's opening lead being from a short suit.

Japanese Cherry Tree.

COVET my neighbor's house?
Ah, no,
I do not want his house.
But, oh,
The tree against his garden wall!

An elfin tree,
Absurdly small,
That always
At the touch of spring
Sighs fragrantly,
Remembering
A far celestial garden spot
Whose bridges,
Delicately wrought,
Span silver pools
Where mirrored lie
The cherry blooms
Against the sky.

And there——
While April hours are tolled,
The Orientals
Young and old
Pay homage to the cherry trees
From whose resplendent canopies
The petals flutter over all.

And here——
Against a barren wall
A tree forlornly sheds its flowers
Unsung except by April showers;
No blossom-feast,
No worshipping,
Only a lonely bit of spring.

Covet my neighbor's house?
Ah, no,
I could not want his house.
But, oh,
That lovely little alien tree—
It, bough and bloom, belongs to me!

Alien.

HE WAS a farmer's son, born and and bred of the soil,
Chained to the cotton-row, bound to back-breaking toil.

But far back in his blood there was a Viking strain—
A wild and sea-roving strain; and the rippling grain,
Silver-green beneath the sun, stirred faint and dreaming
Memories in his blood . . . memories of a gleaming
Green and silver sea. The roaring of the pines made Him faint with longing for the pounding surf's cannonade.

He was different from his fellows—alien and alone—
His Viking blood remembering what his brain had never known.

THE LONG road lies before you—

Willows in Spring.

ALONG the broad Potomac's
northern side
The willows feel the spring almost too soon,
And dipping down their branches to the tide
They make their curtsies to the April moon.
For days and nights they scan the Southern shore
For any signs of wings returning home,
And restlessly they watch the river lower—
No wonder that their green is first to come!

Though these old willows do not draw the crowd
That comes to gaze on sterile blooms more famed
But not more lovely, O let them be proud
For theirs is beauty that can not be named!
They are so strong to watch while others sleep . . .
I do not understand why they should weep.

Gift of the alien ocean, gift of the tide!

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

John Bullus—Charlotte Jane Rumsey.

A social leader of early day Washington was Mrs. John Bullus, the former Charlotte Jane Rumsey, of Cecil County, Maryland. Dr. Bullus, her husband, was a surgeon in the Navy and his wife was an intimate of Dolly Madison. Gilbert Stuart painted her portrait.

Dr. and Mrs. John Bullus Social Leaders in Days of the Adamses.

Their Romance Forms One of Idyls of American History.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

A CLOSE-UP of early Washington society in the days when John Adams and his wife, Abigail Adams, ruled the affairs of state in the newly created Capital on the banks of the Potomac would have revealed certain ladies as leaders of the social affairs of the moment.

It was a gay and brilliant set, too, despite the fact that the future National Capital was largely a mud hole on an expansive scale. This fact did not deter the belles and beaux of little old Washington, Georgetown, Alexandria and Annapolis from journeyings to and fro—ceaseless interchange of hospitality and entertainments that at times turned into house parties lasting for a week or more.

Prominent in the social life of Washington at this time were Dolly Madison, afterward to preside over White House affairs, first as the hostess for the widower President, Thomas Jefferson, and later in her own right as wife of the President; Mrs. William W. Seaton, who had been the lovely Sarah Gales; Mrs. Albert Galltin; Mrs. James Monroe, later to be a First Lady of the Land; Mrs. Alexander Macomb, Mrs. Richard Rush, and last but by no means least, Mrs. John Bullus, formerly of Cecil County, Md., noted in her native State for her beauty and grace.

Much interest was attached to the romance between the erudite Dr. John Bullus, of Philadelphia, a gentleman of medical skill, good name and fortune, and dashing Charlotte Jane Rumsey, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Charles Rumsey, of Cecil County. Col. Rumsey was a descendant of the first Charles Rumsey in this country, who came from Wales in about 1678. Fortune smiled on the provident Charles and by the time his son, James, was born in 1742, one of the earliest inventors of means of applying steam to marine propulsion, had acquired wide lands and other property.

John Bullus had a splendid background in the Quaker State. As a young man he had studied medicine with the renowned Dr. Benjamin Rush, a leader in that profession in early America. Devoted to his profession, John Bullus was diverted for a time by the charms of Miss Rumsey, the vivacious Maryland belle, whom he met during one of her frequent visits to Philadelphia.

We can picture the lovely maiden in her attractive gown made according to the vogue of the moment—"close and short-waisted, the breast and shoulder being covered by a full muslin kerchief."

In 1800 Dr. Bullus won his suit and he journeyed to Cecil County to claim the hand of his bride. After a picturesque wedding and a honeymoon which consisted, mostly, of a long series of visits to the homes of both their friends, Dr. and Mrs. Bullus came to Washington, he with the rank of a surgeon in the Navy, a post he had taken during those anxious months when war with America's former ally and friend, France, seemed to be inevitable.

Washington welcomed the young couple eagerly. It was not long before Mrs. Bullus assumed her place as a social leader. Glancing through the pages of old memoirs we catch a glimpse here and there of her figuring in the social calendar of the day. They lived in a quaint old house, long since torn down, and entertained lavishly.

Attracted by her beauty, Gilbert Stuart, the noted artist and preserver of the features of so many notable Americans, including the famous Gilbert Stuart portraits of George Washington, asked for a sitting and got it. He was charmed with her possibilities in the matter of portraiture and one of his best paintings is of Mrs. Bullus. He also painted Dr. Bullus, and it is through the existence of these portraits that their features have been preserved for posterity.

When Thomas Jefferson assumed the office of President and, because he was widowed, Mrs. Dolly Madison, wife of his Secretary of State, became his hostess in the absence of his married daughter, Mrs. Bullus soon became the intimate of the dashing Dolly.

In 1807 Dr. Bullus resigned his commission in the Navy to accept the post of consul at Marseille. His wife had longed for a stay in Europe. She was eager to give her children the advantages of European travel, and Dr. Bullus fell eagerly in line with her ambitions.

Before they sailed for Marseille in June, 1807, the Bullus family were the guests of honor at many farewell parties. One of these was to be given by their good friends, Mr. and Mrs. George Washington Custis, of Arlington House, Virginia. Mr. Custis was the grandson of Mrs. Martha Washington and the adopted son of Gen. Washington.

When the time came for the tea, Mrs. Bullus was indisposed and could not accompany her husband. While at the Arlington table, Dr. Bullus admired the beautiful cups and saucers, which were on Sevres china, each one bearing the initials "G. W." in gold letters, as they belonged to a set of china presented to Gen. Washington by the Comte de Custine. The next day a basket of gooseberries came from Arlington to Mrs. Bullus and buried under the berries was one of the beautiful cups and saucers.

When Dr. Bullus sailed with his family with Capt James Barron in June, 1807, he was a participant in the very remarkable engagement between the Chesapeake and the Leopard. Having removed his wife and children to a place of safety, Dr. Bullus took his position on deck and remained there during this unequal engagement. Later he was selected by President Madison as a bearer of dispatches and sent to England in relation to the matter.

On their return to America Dr. and Mrs. Bullus passed much time at the Rumsey home in Cecil County. Their lives were pleasant to the end of their romance and their descendants cherish it as one of the striking idyls of American history.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Which course of action do you recommend for the plain-looking girl who will never have much to choose from in the field of men—compromise [illegible] cepting the attention of such nondescript men as she can attract, or going alone in the hope of some day finding a man she can really be proud of and care for.

* * * *

I am well read, intelligent, fastidious in tastes, but the circumstances of my early life were such that I never had opportunity for making friends of the opposite sex. And I am not much for looks. I have no difficulty in making women friends and holding them, but with men it's different. I can't seem to interest men of the type I could care for.

* * * *

Once in a while some man I wouldn't look at twice if I could have my choice shows me a little attention. At best, I encourage it half heartedly, but mostly I fend it off. Consequently, I am very lonely most of the time. But the truth is, I feel awkward and ill at ease in the company of men who are so foreign to the type of man I could care about. What is the sensible thing to do?

CHOOSEY.

DEAR CHOOSEY: The sensible thing to do is stop thinking of yourself as unattractive; to remember the lines written by John Burroughs: ". . . awake, asleep, by night or day, the friends I seek are seeking me; no winds can drive their bark astray, nor change the tide of destiny."

* * * *

It would be unwise to go against the dictates of your own intuitive taste in the matter of masculine companionship. I am positive your greatest handicap in attracting the type of man you would choose for friend is your unwarranted feeling of inferiority. "As a man thinketh so is he." The same rule applies to women. Your own conviction that you cannot compete on equal terms with "the pretty, the smart, the fashionable, the popular girls" is no doubt reflected in your attitude. You probably go shrinking through life, so convinced you are a mousey little nonentity in the eyes of attractive men that they sense and share your conviction.

* * * *

You are probably a victim of your own emotional restraint. If you could let yourself go a little, to the extent of entertaining a definite interest in some man of the type which attracts you, without waiting for him to make the first move, it might result in a delicate blossoming of the power to attract which is latent in every intelligent woman.

* * * *

Women who are convinced they aren't, and can never be, attractive to the type of men who are their social or mental equals often make the mistake of not exerting themselves to the utmost to realize their potentialities of charm.

I advise you to take a creative interest in your appearance, with special attention to cosmetics, coiffure, manicure and flattering feminine accessories of costuming. A woman who never leaves her boudoir until she is satisfied she has left nothing undone to perfect her appearance is one who meets the world—and particularly the men in it—with a conviction of attractiveness that is contagious. Bureau Revises Hints on Health For the Infant

Children's Service of Labor Department Cautions Parents on Feeding.

MOST BABIES are well when they are born. To keep your baby well feed him according to the doctor's advice, teach him good health habits, and get the doctor's help in guarding him against disease, says the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor in a new, revised edition of "Keeping the Well Baby Well."

"Regularity is a good thing for a baby, and therefore it is well to plan his day according to a schedule. A regular routine of bathing, dressing, feeding, sleeping, sun baths, play and exercise, and elimination should be planned, but the program need not be so rigid that it can never be altered," the folder says. A daily program for the well baby under 5 months of age is suggested, but the mother who finds that this plan does not fit her home arrangements is advised to work one out for herself. Whatever plan is chosen should be followed with reasonable closeness, but not as a rigid rule.

The doctor should be consulted about the baby's food and the baby should be taken to him at least once a month for general advice to help keep him well.

The folder gives four simple rules for avoiding disease. They are:

1. Have the baby immunized against diphtheria when he is 6 months old or soon after, and vaccinated against smallpox before he is 1 year old.
2. Keep him away from anyone who is ill. A person who has "only a cold" or "just a cough" may infect a baby and make him seriously ill. Never take a baby into crowded places such as stores or theaters.
3. Keep flies and other insects away from him and from his food.
4. Boil his milk and drinking water and unless the doctor orders otherwise cook all his other food except fruit juices and cod-liver oil.

"A well baby has clear skin, wide-open eyes, springy muscles, and a contented expression. He cries very little, has a good appetite, sleeps quietly with his mouth closed. He shows no evidence of pain or discomfort and he gains steadily in weight, height, and ability to do things.

"If your baby does not have these signs of health and normal development tell the doctor," the folder says.

Spring's Time To Clean Skin —Here's How

Beauty Expert Tells What Is Necessary to Have Fresh Face.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SPRING cleaning has a particular meaning for a certain young Frenchman who presides over one of Washington's busiest and best downtown beauty salons.

He admits that it's all very well for the ladies to bestir themselves around the house seeing that the floors are polished and the windows washed. He can also see why we office girls will busy ourselves tidying up desk drawers and oiling typewriters. There's that about spring that promotes the cleaning urge, he says. But what's more important than the housecleaning and office sprucing, emphasizes our young Frenchman, is a thorough face clean-up!

Nothing halfway, mind you. No little superficial treatment! Oh, no! In a fascinating accent he'll explain to you that now is the time to purge your pores of all the waste make-up and dust and grime that have seeped into them during the winter.

Ready to Explain.

He will also tell you just how to free your skin of all the troublesome matter that's been brimming over in pimples and blackheads.

A ways and means committee of one, he suggests his plastic mask—a real French importation—for freshening, cleansing, renovating the skin. It takes a couple of hours to give—but my what it does!

First your skin is cleansed and toned, then the mask, a melted wax-like substance, is spread across the face with a brush. This alone takes half an hour. It's left on for about the same length of time while it dries. Meantime, it has seeped down into the pores, laid hold of every speck of dust and waste. When it is removed, it comes off whole, so that you can see your face in reverse—and not only that but all the impurities that came out of it.

After the mask is used, you can rejoice in real freedom——freedom from the waste that has clogged your pores. You can pat yourself on the back for having a spring cleaning that is a cleaning. And you can glory in presenting a brand new face to the world, as fresh and lovely as the spring itself!

Just because the young French beauty expert is all a-twitter over his own clean-up methods, he is giving the mask this week for half price. You're a wise woman if you take advantage of such a splendid offer!

Modern Chair Shown.

Those who contend that modernistic furniture has little of comfort to recommend it should try a certain attractive leather and chrome chair featured in a downtown store.

In design it's one step ahead of streamline. In comfort it's miles ahead of anything that's ever been called a chair.

Thanks to certain ingenious springs, you no sooner sit down in it than you're lulled by a gentle motion that seems hardly to come from the chair itself.

This shining example of modernistic furniture is available in green, blue and yellow leather, combined with nontarnishable chrome.

Make-up Boxes Offered.

We'd give an award for originality to the beautician who designed the clever little make-up boxes featured in a downtown store. They'll take your fancy and run right away with it!

When you first see them doubtless you'll think they're unusually attractive powder boxes covered with blue satin and trimmed in silver. But you will be surprised, and oh, so delighted, when you lift the top and find eye shadow, cream rouge, and compact rouge. Perhaps you'll be a bit mystified, too, for these take up very little space across the top and there must be something underneath. There's no opening, though. The mystery deepens! Aha! Pull the bottom out, and up very little space across the top and there must be something underneath. There's no opening, though. The mystery deepens! Aha! Pull the bottom out, and there comes a large box of powder, a fine, misty powder, that you must have heard about. It's famous for the flattering finish it imparts to the skin.

The price—now you will be amazed—is only $1.50 for the complete outfit. No, of course it wasn't always this reasonable. Only a short time ago this dainty make-up symphony sold for $3. A real bargain now!

Simple Beauty Kits.

A great many of the so-called business woman beauty kits contain so many preparations that the business woman would be busier than ever trying to use them all during office hours. After all, what she wants is a simple kit, small enough to tuck away in her desk drawer, simple enough for a quick clean-up and modest enough in price to meet her budget restrictions.

Had she designed her own kit she could find nothing more suited to her needs than the new one brought out by a nationally known beauty concern. A small, sturdy little black box (black for practicality's sake!) contains a cleansing cream, a skin tonic, a lotion for improving the texture of the skin and especially prepared for both dry and oily skins and a generous-sized box of powder. The whole she-bang costs only $1, although if you bought the preparations separately they'd cost much more.

Rich Chinese Tapestry, Once a Gift To Tsien Tu Sun, Shown in Capital

This Chinese tapestry was made 200 years ago to be presented to Tsien Tu Sun on his seventieth birthday. It is the property of Mrs. G. O. Williams, of Atlantic City, and is being displayed by the Manoukian Brothers, 1332 Connecticut avenue. Mrs. George Bollinger is shown beside the tapestry.

Rare Handiwork, Valued at $15,000, Owned by Former Resident.

ALMOST 200 years ago a group of Chinese dignitaries united to send a gift to Tsien Tu Sun on his seventieth birthday. They selected a magnificent tapestry which was designed especially for this purpose. Today this outstanding example of Chinese handicraft hangs in the windows of Manoukian Bros., Inc., 1332 Connecticut avenue.

The imposing tapestry belong to Mrs. G. O. Williams, formerly a Washington resident, now making her home in Atlantic City.

Mr. Sarkis Manoukian, under whose guardianship the tapestry was placed, estimates its value at about $15,000.

Mrs. Williams recently paid a Chinese professor $250 to translate the inscription embroidered in golden threads against a dusky rose background.

This translation was a difficult job because the inscription was in the official style customary at the time, and in a language frequently referred to today as "Chinese Latin."

Only after months of intensive study on the part of the professor did the exquisitely embroidered inscription yield its centuries-old secret. Here was a beautifully written eulogy to Tsien Tu San and a brief resume of his life. The writer had traced the difficulties through which the honored gentleman had been forced to fight his way, stressing all the while that it was his honesty and fine character which had brought him ultimate success.

The inscription is rich with Chinese philosophy eloquently expressed. One passage reads, "The kites can not fly if the wind is not abundantly strong; ships can not sail if water is not great in volume; blessings can not be received if your desserts are not full; enjoyment of great age can not be yours if your morals have been weak."

The eulogy is signed by each of the 21 dignitaries, many of whom were relatives of Tsien Tu Sun.

Around the border of the tapestry is a group of golden dragons whose symbolism seems lost today. Lost also is the interpretation of an inner border made up of several detailed scenes, which the translator suggests might depict episodes in the life of Tsien Tu Sun.

Inscriptions in Gold Threads Translated by Scholar.

Unfortunately, this masterpiece was never completed. Even now it is possible to see tracing which was never embroidered. However, these are so few that to the casual observer the tapestry seems a magnificent whole.

Time has passed it by with a gentle touch for not only is the embroidery intact, but for the main part, the silken body itself.

According to Mr. Manoukian, Mrs. Williams purchased the tapestry in France, and later brought it to this country.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Mallory works in a real estate office, and develops such proficiency in tennis that she wins a sectional tournament. Michael Dale shares her pleasure in the victory, but insists that she keep her promise to marry him immediately and forget all about tennis. Ellen finally decides that her love for Mike is more important than a career.

Her mother is displeased over the approaching marriage. Mrs. Mallory wants to keep Ellen's pay check in the family and, realizing Ellen's determination to get married, plays her trump card. She has incurred debts amounting to $2,700 which she can not pay. Ellen loyally assumes a $500 note at the bank and promises to pay it in monthly installments of $20.

Before Ellen can explain her new responsibility to Mike, he insists that they be married at once. Their week-end honeymoon ends wretchedly. Upon their return to Fairhaven, Mrs. Mallory, hysterical, suffers a "heart attack" and insists that Ellen spend the night with her. Ellen goes to the new little home the next day, anything but a happy bride.

Finally Ellen tells Mike the story of the debts, but he stubbornly refuses to let her go back to work.

"WE'LL manage somehow, dear," Mike said. "The debt at the bank belongs to you. We'll pay it and we'll pay it on time. It might have been easier if I hadn't bought into the firm. Before that, I had a regular drawing account and I didn't have to worry about exactly how much I would have each month. Now it's different, but that will be all the more reason why I need to work harder.

"We'll manage somehow. If we didn't have the payments on the house to consider we might have managed all of it."

And Ellen tried to put into words some of the worries that beset her.

"Maybe—if I'd waited it would have been better. I knew all of these things. I knew them perfectly well. I'd added the list up and I'd added it down. There wasn't any way of getting around those debts. I ought never to have given in to your plans that day, down in Bethany. I know now that I ought never to have listened, dear."

Bankruptcy Imminent.

"We did what was the right thing to do," Michael told her slowly. "Don't you ever think any other thing. We'll make it come out all right. You see if we don't. We'll take care of this note and not mind it. I only wish we could take care of it all. But we can't, dear, that's certain. There's only one thing for your mother to do, Ellen, only one thing".

Ellen knew, without asking, what he meant. She had talked that all over with Mr. Applequist, the banker, and that had been his advice, too. But she asked, just the same.

"Bankruptcy?"

"Yes. Oh, I know," when she would have protested, "that your mother won't like to do it. No one does. But it isn't disgrace and she shouldn't consider it so. It's only a provision of the law that makes it easier to wipe the slate and start clean again.

"Your mother'll have her home clear and nothing can touch the little income she has. It's the only way to free herself from this burden of debt that she never can pay."

In her heart Ellen knew that Michael spoke truthfully. She knew that he was courteous and kind in his decision of the only way in which the difficult situation could be handled.

She even promised to talk to her mother very soon about it but even when she promised Ellen knew that the wedge of financial worry slowly being driven between herself and the husband she loved was driven just that much more deeply between them.

Michael insisted that Ellen buy a pretty new dress. "Get a classy one, honey, do. Get more than one. All these people having parties for us makes me want to see my wife look like a million dollars."

Ellen laughed aloud just out of sheer joy in being young and in love and married to the nicest man in the world. "You want to buy something for me. Well, darling, you're going to have your way. Wait until I step out to the Langhan's party for us."

The Prettiest Wife.

And that made big, good looking Mike grin all over. "Ben's always bragging about his wife and how well she looks in her clothes. I've got a real kick coming when I see you step out."

"But don't worry," Ellen said with real wifely concern, "I'll not break up the partnership with my extravagance, but I will buy a pretty dress if you're sure we can afford it."

Mike said: "We're going to afford some things, little sweetheart, see if we don't. I'm not going to be married to the prettiest girl in the State and not see that she has nice things."

Yes, in the shelter of her own little home, alone in the cheerful rooms she loved so well, Ellen was always happy. And radiantly happy when she was alone with Mike. But in the times she visited her old home, and sometimes she was ashamed at the infrequency of her visits, everything was gloomy.

Rose Mallory did not encourage the visits of her son-in-law. Sometimes, when Ellen ran over for a little afternoon visit Michael would drive past for her on his way home.

But his mother-in-law never invited him in, never attempted in anyway to encourage a kindlier feeling between them.

One late afternoon waiting for Michael to drive past, Ellen tried to remonstrate with her mother a little about her coolness toward her husband.

"Why don't you come on over home with me, Mama?" she coaxed. "I've got the cutest little roast in the electric cooker with vegetables and everything just ready to pop on the table.

"And what do you think, Mama, I tried my hand at making cherry pie this morning. Mike's mother says he's fonder of cherry pie than any person she ever knew. So I just got her recipe and tried it out. And there are a couple of lollypop pies waiting.

"Come on, now; that's a dear; let me take you home with me. Why, it's almost a crime. Here I've been married nearly two months and you haven't even been inside our new home."

Perhaps it might have been better if Aunt Ellen had not broken into the conversation. "Poor dear soul," Ellen thought, "she wants to help me so much that she doesn't realize that she is doing the wrong thing entirely."

For Aunt Ellen had cut in quickly. "Yes, Rose, do go. I'll get dinner here. Bob'll be perfectly all right. And, any way, you ought to go. All the rest of the family has been over, several times.

"And the neighbors will be talking first thing we know. Why, I met Mrs. Benson on the street the other day. She said, 'How does your sister-in-law like Ellen's new husband?' I knew that very minute there'd been plenty of talk going on about it."

And good old Aunt Ellen stopped, not for sheer lack of breath but because she had caught a look in her sister-in-law's eyes that she always dreaded.

"That will be enough," Rose Mallory said bitterly. "I don't doubt that the neighbors are talking. But let them talk. Ellen married on her own account. She did not have my permission and she'll never have my approval.

"I'll never set foot inside her house, and as for Michael Dale, I never want to speak to him again as long as I live."

Would Do It Again.

And nothing Ellen could say or do would alter the set determination of her mother.

"I'm sorry, Ellen," Rose Mallory said testily. "But I fairly begged you not to go and get married. You had everything ahead of you—you gave it all up. What for?"

"For the man I loved," Ellen said, miserably. "And I'd do it again."

"Perhaps you would, Ellen," pointedly. "You're living your own life. It didn't matter to you that I'd sacrificed everything, worked my fingers to the bone—"

Aunt Ellen couldn't stand that. "Don't get feeling so sorry for yourself, Rose. I haven't seen any great sacrifices going on around here. Sure enough you've kept house and cooked and washed clothes, so have 50,000,000 other mothers—to raise their children.

"And a lot of 'em, right here in our neighborhood have had it a mighty sight harder, let me tell you. If my brother hadn't been far sighted and left you with an income——"

"Fifteen dollars a week—I couldn't call that an income——"

"Well, a lot of mothers have raised families on less than that, I'll tell you, and raised them well."

"I'll say they raised them well!" Ellen always disliked hearing her mother speak in that mood. Cutting things were certain to be said, words better left unsaid.

"I'll say none of them raised them any better than I raised mine. Here's Ellen, graduated from high school. She went as well dressed as any of the girls—and then graduating from business college."

Salads Need Helpful Spice Of Dressings

Mayonnaise Affords Many Possibilities in Variations.

By Dorothea Duncan.

SALADS come to the fore again, but this time with more emphasis given to the dressings. The fresh succulent vegetables and the tart, tantalizing fruits, which are the first gifts of spring, make admirable salads, but the dressing must be in complete harmony with the fruit or vegetable in question.

Some of the freshness of the salad must be captured in the dressing; if not, the piquant flavor you have so hopefully tried to create will be lost.

Real mayonnaise affords many possibilities in pleasing variations for both fruit and vegetable salads. One cup of mayonnaise blended with two tablespoons of chopped parsley, three tablespoons of green pepper, finely chopped and one small onion, finely chopped, is an excellent dressing for crisp greens. This amount makes 1¼ cups.

One-half cup of mayonnaise blended with one-half cup of sour cream and one-half cucumber, finely diced, is a pleasant dressing for a green salad too. Equal amounts of chopped pimiento and dried cucumbers may be used instead of all cucumber. This amount makes 1½ cups of dressing.

Cheese Mayonnaise.

A cheese mayonnaise will do wonders to bring out the best in a salad of endive, hearts of lettuce or sliced tomatoes. Try this combination: Blend 3 ounces of cream cheese, one tablespoon of lemon juice, one-half teaspoon of salt, one-half cup of Roquefort cheese and one-half cup of mayonnaise. This amount makes 1¾ cups of dressing.

Fresh strawberries and cream blended with mayonnaise will add the final touch to many a fruit salad. Prepare the dressng this way. Blend one-fourth cup of mayonnaise with one-fourth cup of fresh strawberries which have been hulled and crushed. 2 tablespoons of confectioner's sugar and 1 tablespoon of lemon juice. Into this mixture fold one-fourth cup of whipped cream. This amount makes three-quarters cup of dressing.

A combination of lemon and orange juice may be substituted for the amount of vinegar used in preparing French dressing. Two tablespoons of confectioner's sugar may be added to the dressing after it has been thoroughly mixed. This dressing is excellent for fruit salad also.

The usual French dressing plus a liberal supply of crumbled Roquefort cheese will do wonders for plain lettuce, romaine or a tomato and cucumber combination.

This cooked salad dressing is excellent for children, and it may be used in combination with whipped cream for fruit salads. The recipe calls for sweet or sour milk, and for that reason is a good one to remember for summer use.

Cooked Salad Dressing.

4 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon paprika
2 eggs or 4 egg yolks, well beaten
½ cup vinegar
2 teaspoons mustard
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons sugar
1½ cups sweet or sour milk
2 tablespoons butter.

Combine flour, seasonings and sugar in the top of a double boiler. Add eggs and mix until smooth. Add milk, then add vinegar slowly, mixing well. Place over hot water and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from fire. Add butter. Cool. Makes two cups dressing.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Prevention of Deafness.

SEVERAL weeks ago we had something to say about Meniere's disease. As a result several hundred letters were received, many of which called attention to the increasing number of persons who are deaf or hard of hearing.

We can not escape the observation that many of the acute diseases of childhood, particularly measles and scarlet fever, are prone to leave a permanent mark upon the hearing. Everything that can be done to reduce the widespread incidence of these diseases will result in preserving this invaluable sense.

We must clearly recognize the influence of sinus disease as a factor in ear trouble. The intimate relation between sinus infection and general health can be traced with equal positiveness to the ear.

We must also recognize another source of deafness, namely, loud noises. Insults to the hearing nerve, if repeated often enough and long enough, will be followed by degeneration of that structure.

Prevention lies, first, in avoiding acute disease and any and all infections of the upper air passages including the sinuses. If infection comes despite our precautions, bed rest and good nursing, in most instances, will bring about recovery free from complications. We must remember that disease that destroys hearing is rarely primary; that is, it follows an infection elsewhere in the body.

Jobs for Servants Open in Cleveland

Cleveland (U.P.).—More than 300 unfilled domestic jobs are on file at Cleveland State-city employment bureau in city hall here, awaiting "takers."

And the harder it becomes to find experienced servants, the higher go the wages, according to the bureau.

"Experienced girls for maids simply are not available," said Mrs. Melba Oliver, in charge of domestic employment. "We can't find trained girls to send out for interviews. If one does walk into the office, we can send her out immediately."

Yale Men to Quit Finance for Law

The typical Yale man of the future will be a lawyer rather than a broker, a recent poll conducted by the Yale Daily News shows.

Ninety-nine out of 450 seniors plan legal careers. This is twice as many as will enter any other profession or business.

The poll shows a decrease in the number intending to enter business or finance. Only ten plan to become brokers, less than a fifth of the number that looked to such a career ten years ago. Fifteen plan to enter journalism and four the ministry. Forty-four will enter medicine and 19 banking. Three will open restaurants and one will develop a fish hatchery.

Top Executives Get Headaches From New Law

Accurately Reporting Financial Condition No Easy Task.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5.—The corporation executive, charged with responsibility of reporting company condition to security holders, is twitching with a new brand of nerves this spring.

As well as suffering from misgivings that he may exaggerate favorable conditions relating to his company, Wall street accountants say that in preparing his quarterly and annual reports he now frequently tosses at night for fear he may understate good tidings.

He knows that under the Federal securities laws he is liable for damages for any statement which is "false or misleading with respect to any material fact."

For instance, he may state in his report that the company's business is "satisfactory." The figures in the report may not justify a more hopeful term.

On the basis of that statement some shareholder may sell his stock. Then the price of the shares, for some reason not connected with the report, may advance 10 points.

This brings up the question, why did not the president of the company make it clear in his report that the stock might soon be worth more?

Some of the Problems.

Assume that he had implied that business was better than "satisfactory." He might have used the term "good"—and in so doing have put himself out on a limb just as shaky.

The statement that business is "good" may attract buyers for the company's stock. In turn, the stock may decline because a group of speculators have elected to sell their holdings, or for some other reason equally beyond the executive's control.

This time the squawk is just as loud, only from the other side of the fence. This time it is asked, "Why were we not warned in the president's report?"

To protect themselves industrial chiefs have hired squads of lawyers and platoons of accountants to make sure their reports will withstand the fire of security owners from both the front and the rear.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has made it clear that it proposes to apply the rule of reason in administering the new securities legislation, but the corporation executives say once a case gets into the courts it is out of the commission's hands and must be decided on the letter of the law.

The legislation is new and a background of precedent is lacking. The company officers propose to take no chances.

New York City Bank Stocks At 1935 Low

New York, May 5.—New York City bank stocks registered a new 1935 low on Tuesday of the past week, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The market then recovered and the aggregate value of 16 leading issues at the close of the week totaled $1,229,510,000, compared with $1,264,115,000 on April 26, a net decrease of $34,606,000, or 2.74 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.76 per cent compares with a yield of 5.60 per cent on April 26. The current market value is now 1.01 times the known book value, against 1.04 times at the close of the previous week. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 11.6 times their known earnings, compared with 11.9 times on April 26.

Insurance Stocks Slightly Higher.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market registered further recovery during the past week, according to figures compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, the aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on May 3 being $516,065,000, against $515,105,000 at the close of the previous week, a net increase of $960,000, or 0.19 per cent. The low for the year, reached on March 14, was $484,613,000.

The current average yield of the 20 issues is 3.75 per cent, against a yield of 3.76 per cent a week ago. The current market value equals 1.22 times the current liquidating value unchanged from the previous week. Combined earnings from underwriting and net investment income equal 8.32 per cent of market value, against 8.33 per cent on April 26. Quoted prices for the 20 issues now average 12.0 times their combined earnings, against 11.9 times at the close of the previous week.

Finance, Business, Economics

Paradox of Falling Business Indices and Prevailing Optimism Explained by Belief Current Decline Will Be Reversed Within Three Months.

New York, May 5.—Two months ago, reports from various centers reflected deep pessimism among business men and bankers, at the very time when the rate of industrial activity was around its high point for the year. Currently, the financial markets and pronouncements of business men reflect widespread optimism, although the rate of industrial activity has dropped materially below the level reached at this time last year, according to standard indices.

This apparent paradox can be readily explained, however. The spring rise in business last year was slow in getting started. Partly, this was a result of strikes in the automobile centers in December and January a year ago, which prevented manufacturers from starting production schedules on their new models on time. Also, the public works program was near its peak at this time last year. Industrial activity was at the high point for the year about the first of May in 1934, whereas the peak was touched about three months earlier this year. Latterly, the sagging tendency has been intensified by a sharp drop in coal shipments, which had been expanded earlier in the year in anticipation of a strike and railroad freight rate increases. Coal output has declined severely now, pending the time when accumulated stocks on hand can be reduced through normal consumption.

Is Auto Output Rounding a Peak?

The factor most likely to cause a further material decline in the rate of business activity would be a seasonal recession in automobile output from the present high rate of some 450,000 cars and trucks monthly. The first statistical indication that motor production may be turning a seasonal peak, in fact, has just come to hand.

The weekly estimate of automobile production made by Cram's Report of Detroit places the output for the week ended May 4 at 110,865 units, as compared with 110,970 the week before. This decline, however, was caused entirely by a reduction in the estimated General Motors' output for the week by 300 cars to 39,825 units. With the Chevrolet strike at the transmissions plant at Toledo, the reported decline is negligible. However, in view of reports of rising stocks of cars in the hands of dealers, and since new models this year are scheduled to be brought out in the fall, some reductions in automobile manufacturing schedules are held certain by the end of this month. Curtailment of automobile manufacturing, of course, would accelerate the recent declining trend in general industrial activity.

The first six months of this year are likely to witness a rise in the average rate of industrial activity by 5 to 10 per cent over 1934, the movement of basic business indicates. However, the first quarter of this year may have witnessed a somewhat higher level of activity than will be seen during the second quarter, whereas, last year the second quarter was far and away better than the first. Hence, the fact that leading indices like coal output, car loadings, steel production and even electric power output have fallen or are falling below the levels reached a year ago reflects merely a different distribution of short-swing peaks and recessions in business this year as compared with last.

Another factor which is believed to demonstrate that the reaction in industrial activity is without broad significance is the favorable comparison made by retail sales. Executives of Nation-wide chain stores estimate that sales for this month will show a rise of 5 to 10 per cent over the corresponding month of 1934. Since prices of goods, apart from foods, are not materially higher, the bulk of this rise would represent an increase in retail trade volume. A part of the increase is attributed to a combination of a late Easter and unseasonable weather in many parts of the country, which caused postponement of spring buying until an unusually late date this year. It is also attributed, however, to freer spending proclivities on the part of the rank and file of the population.

Why Early Revival Is Confidently Expected.

The seasonal decline in business that has been gathering some momentum latterly is likely to last about three months, a survey of opinions in different lines indicates. It is not expected to be nearly as abrupt as that which began in the middle of June of last year, and continued into the late fall. Rather, beginning late in July or early in August, an upturn in industrial activity is confidently expected. This expectation, in fact, constitutes the chief reason for the prevailing optimism in the face of poorer current business reports. The inauguration of the Government's work relief program, the slow, but continued improvement in residential building activity and the preparations for new automobile models in the early fall of this year are three chief factors expected to turn industrial activity upward this year.

Another important influence behind the more optimistic calculations of many business men is the belief that the soldiers' bonus will be paid in cash under either the Vinson or the Harrison plan within the next few months. While many decry the bonus in principle, they remember that the 50 per cent loan on bonus certificates gave a fillip to trade four years ago that lasted several months. At that time the chief beneficiary appeared to be the automobile industry. On this occasion the question is asked whether housing modernization and even new home construction, may not be the chief beneficiary of the making available of a large amount of additional purchasing power in the form of moderate sums to a great number of individuals.

Wall Street Awaits Signs For Guidance

By Claude A. Jagger.

Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, May 5.—Wall street faces the new week groping for a trend.

A decisive pause in the advance which started in financial markets in mid-March, developed last week. Market analysts are trying to decide whether the end of one of those familiar intermediate upward cycles has been reached, or whether the pause merely represents a breathing spell.

Among factors mentioned as contributing to the hesitancy of the past several days were the subsidence of the feverish bull speculation in silver; substantial recessions in such industrial indicators as the movement of freight, electric power production, and steel output; continued fretting in financial circles over the trend of legislation, and some letdown in retail trade.

But a number of analysts expressed the opinion that these were merely surface developments, that there was nothing to indicate a change in the major upward cycle. Although Cram's weekly estimate of automobile production showed a decline for the first time this year, the fact that the recession was of trifling proportions, at a time when a substantial seasonal recession is expected, was construed by some as highly encouraging.

The decided pickup in residential construction, although the volume is still small, and constant pressure of idle investment funds to find profitable investment, were furthermore seen as potentially highly favorable.

Out of the welter of influences clearly favorable or adverse, together with those escaping immediate classification, those taking an optimistic view thought they found considerable support for their opinion. And it was evident that the stock market was in no hurry to jump to a less hopeful view. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks, while failing to duplicate the high of the previous week, closed Saturday at 40.3, up .3 of a point from the preceding Saturday.

Greek 7% Bonds To Pay Interest

The Greek Minister of Finance, Mr. P. Tsaldaris, is notifying bondholders of Greek Refugee Loan 7 per cent Bonds of 1924 American Tranche to present coupons maturing May 1, 1935, to Speyer & Co., New York, for payment of 35 per cent of the face value.

Those accepting such payment will have their coupons returned to them stamped "35 per cent paid." The payment of the coupons is to be considered as an acceptance by bondholders that the whole settlement of the above loan for the financial year, 1935-36, will be effected in the same manner as during the financial year, 1934-35.

Low Price Bond Demand Marks Sales of Week

Said to Indicate Existence of Funds Seeking Employment.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5.—A strong demand for low-priced issues of most all classifications was an outstanding feature of the bond market last week.

Reflecting the existence of a wealth of idle funds seeking profitable employment and timidity on the part of investors to venture into the prime investment field where prices are already high and the popularity of the refunding vogue added a note of caution, junior obligations were picked up in substantial volume and new 1935 tops were made by a sizeable number.

United States Government bonds continued in a strong position with most of the Treasury issues establishing new peaks on two successive days and then sliding back a trifle on profit taking. The list as a whole showed moderate advances on the week.

Refunding Increases.

The refunding tide swept onward with increasing force. Among other preparations completed during the week to refund existing obligations at a lower interest rate, was the action of stockholders of the Edison Co. of Boston in authorizing directors to proceed with plans to issue $53,000,000 in bonds to retire the company $55,000,000 in coupon notes due in 1937.

Announcement was also made during the week that a special stockholders meeting of the Commonwealth Edison will be held in Chicago at an early date to consider proposals to call the company's $29,500,000 series E and G bonds and issue other securities bearing a lower coupon rate. It was understood that a banking syndicate had already agreed to underwrite such an issue.

Indicative of the healthy condition in the State and municipal bond market is the large number of new offerings constantly being made with splendid results. Among other issues scheduled to be sold during the week beginning May 6, is one of $11,500,000 of the metropolitan water districts of California and one of $1,000,000 City of Chicago Park District bonds which will be sold on Tuesday. The total State and municipal financing during the week will aggregate around $19,000,000.

British Budget Lists Surplus

New York, May 5.—The new British budget for the year 1935-36 estimates a surplus of £500,000. Since the budget provides for a reduction in tax rates, it is evident that the British authorities are basing their estimate of a surplus on a continuation of business recovery. This is a good indication, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute, that a further improvement in business will materialize since the British budget estimates are nearly always remarkably accurate.

Thus, for example, actual revenues during the fiscal year 1934-35 amounting to £716,441,000 were only £9,300,000 larger than the original estimates. In other words, the difference between estimates and actual revenues amounted to only 1.4 per cent. The accuracy with which the British government estimated its expenditures was still greater.

Actual expenditures, amounting to £708,879,000, were only £3,179,000, or 0.4 per cent in excess of the estimates. The British budget differs materially from the American system, where actual revenues and expenditures show a wide divergence from the original estimates.

Class I Railroads Earn 1.69% On Investment in 1st Quarter

Return to Some 145 Companies Was 2.24 Per Cent in First 3 Months of Last Year; 50 Lines Fail to Cover Expenses and Taxes in Period.

Class I railroads of the United States for the first three months of 1935 had a net railway operating income of $84,773,560, which was at the annual rate of return of 1.69 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads. In the first three months of 1934, their net railway operating income was $112,696,133, or 2.24 per cent on their property investment.

Property investment is the value of road and equipment as shown by the books of the railways, including materials, supplies and cash. The net railway operating income is what is left after the payment of operating expenses, taxes and equipment rentals but before interest and other fixed charges are paid.

This compilation as to earnings for the first three months of 1935 is based on reports from 145 Class I railroads representing a total of 238,092 miles.

Gross operating revenues for the first three months of 1935 totaled $800,057,121, compared with $799,872,358 for the same period in 1934. Operating expenses for the first three months of 1935 amounted to $626,358,362, compared with $593,742,384 for the same period in 1934, or an increase of 5.5 per cent.

Chicago Banks Stop Time Deposit Interest

The action was taken when funds began to arrive from New York, where last week a similar step was taken.

Profit Taking Lowers Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5.—The curb market ran into substantial profit taking last week, but near the close of the period the general list rallied sufficiently to cancel losses in most issues.

The decline in the speculative price of silver in the world market unsettled metal issues, but such shares as Sunshine Mining, Newmont, Bunker Hill & Sullivan and New York & Honduras Rosario were quick to regain their equilibrium as silver quotations stabilized near the close of the week.

Scattered specialties, including Murphy Co., Texas Gulf Products, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, United Shoe Machinery, Aluminum Co. of America and Greyhound Corporation displayed independent strength. Other shares that were vigorous on the comeback included American Gas & Electric, Gulf Oil, Humble, Swift Internacional, International Petroleum and Swift & Co.

Transfer for each full session averaged around 170,000 shares.

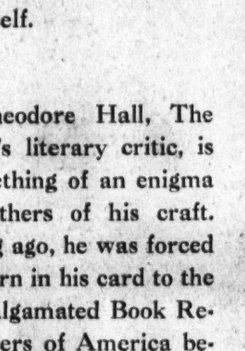
Willie, the Office Boy, has often asked us, "Why is a book critic?" We know the answer: A book critic is a person who, practically, is chained to a typewriter and who reads all the new books in order to save others time, expense and worry in choosing good books to buy, borrow, or send as a birthday present to Aunt Minnie who lives in Peoria. Too, this book critic must write so interestingly about books that his column is excellent daily reading in itself.

Theodore Hall, The Post's literary critic, is something of an enigma to others of his craft. Long ago, he was forced to turn in his card to the Amalgamated Book Reviewers of America because he violated union rules in actually praising a new novel. You see, his column, "No End of Books," found each day on the Page Opposite Editorials, really helps you in your literary wanderings, and is not used as a private sounding board for Theodore Hall. Then, too, he can't pick bones with every new book. He can never tell when some struggling author whom he has panned mercilessly will turn out to be a second Cabell or Lewis . . . or, like Upton Sinclair, dope out an EPIC campaign and enter politics!



But his reports are accurate, clear, concise and complete. He knows his trade and his authors (the man who wrote "Dodsworth" is just plain "Red" Lewis to him). His pronouncements are serious and studied, like those of the Delphian oracle, but they're far from Deadly Dull. You'll find him discussing with equal zest the latest economic scheme for dragging Prosperity from behind that corner, or the poems of Edna St. Vincent Millay, or P. G. Wodehouse's latest "Jeeves" story. He writes well, too. Not many persons know that helped "ghost-write" a famous, best-selling American history.

"No End of Books," a friend once told us, must be written by a chap with no end of spare time for reading all those books. Well, Ted's that sort of a chap. Not long ago, after he had been unlocked from his typewriter and allowed an afternoon off, we discovered him browsing around in Brentano's basement.

He recognized us and blushed guiltily. "Oh," he admitted, "I just thought I'd like a good book to read tonight."

Feminists Ask Merit System GuideNew Deal

'Spoils' Jobs Leap Almost 100,000, Voters' League Holds in Report.

By the Associated Press.

Placing all New Deal agencies under civil service was advocated by the League of Women Voters yesterday in a report asserting Federal "political jobs" increased from 110,000 to 200,000 in the single year ended last June.

A 55-page study of the "Spoils System" in Federal State and local Governments issued as league leaders assembled in biennial general council, also said "the depression is largely responsible for discriminations against married persons, either by law or practice."

"From the standpoint of personnel administration on a merit basis," the report said, "there is obviously no justification for such discriminations against married persons."

Miss Katherine A. Frederic, author of the report, said personnel practices in New Deal agencies varied greatly and that "in spite of the efforts of some of those in authority it is still true that political influence is too often the determining factor." She said postmasterships should be taken out of "the hands of the spoilsman."

The report contended the spoils system was "a liability to a political party and a menace to good government" and urged "the need of a sound, broadly-applied merit system" in public service.

Miss Frederic recommended elimination of "pressure of the party boss of special interest groups" and establishment of a career service system to stress "the aristocracy of ability." She added: "The United States already has the beginning of a career service, notably in city management, in its foreign service and in the scientific and technical branches of the Federal Government."

Law Requiring Auto Inspection Urged to Save Lives in D. C.

Half the Cars Here Are Reported to Have Important Mechanical Defects Which Peril Pedestrians and Other Autoists.

Half of the cars being driven on Washington streets have some important mechanical defect relating directly to their safe operation. This inexcusable condition is believed by experts to be a serious contributory cause to the high traffic toll.

To remedy the situation a proposed law has been drafted providing compulsory semi-annual inspection of all cars bearing District tags. The plan is now before the Commissioners' committee and, if approved, will be forwarded to Congress for legislative action. It bears the approval of the Board of Trade, the Traffic Council, the Citizens' Associations, the American Automobile Association, the automobile dealers, the Director of Traffic and other groups and clubs.

The proposed law provides for city-owned inspection stations to be constructed on city property, if possible, and using city-owned equipment. No actual repair work would be undertaken at the stations. The car would be gone over thoroughly, the necessary repairs noted and the driver instructed to have these made at his garage within a week. When the car has been put in satisfactory mechanical condition a sticker certifying this fact would be issued to the driver. The cost of the inspection would be borne by a tax of $1 the first year which would be added to the registration fee. The second year this would be reduced to 50 cents.

The inspection would consist of a brake test, a light test, steering mechanism and wiper inspection. In addition, the inspector would look over the car generally to assure himself that it could be operated safely.

Brake Tests Provided.

To pass a satisfactory brake test the driver of a car must be able to come to a dead stop within 40 feet while proceeding at 20 miles an hour. As for the lights, no glaring beam shall rise higher than the middle of the lamps of another car approaching on a level highway. At least one windshield wiper shall be in good functioning condition. The steering apparatus must be sensitive to the turn of the steering gear so that it is not loose.

This is the law designed for your protection as a driver and a pedestrian. It has been found in other cities that it will cut the auto death toll materially. The first year that this plan was placed in effect in Memphis a 25 per cent reduction in automobile accidents was noted. The semiannual inspection plan also is used in Montreal, Canada, and Evanston, Ill., among other cities.

Drivers having their cars inspected will not be required to wait a long period of time. The director of traffic has worked out a staggered plan for the tests to prevent this. While the car is being tested you will have a chance to see some pictures, charts, diagrams and demonstrations prepared by traffic officials to help you operate your car more safely. And in addition, the inspector's final test will assure you that the work done on your car was satisfactorily and thoroughly done.

Are You Sure?

You may say to yourself, "That is all very fine. But my car functions absolutely perfect." But does it? Think for a moment about your brakes. Do they hold securely at all times? Are you sure that the rear light works and that the headlights do not throw out a glare? Does that wiper work when you want it? And how about the steering apparatus? Is it in good shape? Are all the rest of the various parts of the car in safe operating condition?

I believe that there are a certain number of people in tonight's Postilion audience that are willing, even anxious, to do their part to cut the Washington auto death toll. If you are listed among this group, and you drive a car, won't you have it inspected for safe operation at your garage. For your own protection, and for the protection of others, why not take it upon yourself voluntarily to have your car looked over to be sure that it can be operated safely?

You may reason, as many drivers do, that if your brakes are slightly out of adjustment, you will drive slower to allow for this. But remember, should an emergency arise, should some child dart in front of your car, it will be too late then to have the car placed in perfect mechanical condition.

This proposed law deserves your support. If you are a member of some organization that has not gone on record for it, look it up, and study it over. When you are convinced that it is meritorious, see that the District Commissioners and the chairmen of the House and Senate District Committees know that you favor its enactment.

HEARINGS will begin soon on the Ellenbogen rent control bill, which would "freeze" rents while plans are completed for permanent housing relief in Washington.

BAKER.

Meanwhile letters are pouring in from outraged tenants. The following are some excerpts which will be presented at the rent hearings:

"Have been looking for a house similar to the one I had back home. Rentals for this type of property range from $60 a month upward."

"Let the Government sponsor the building of decent quarters at a nominal fee within the reach of working class and dismantle the hovels and huts that would not be tolerated in most cities."

"Need more and better room. Poor environment for children. Forced to sign a lease to secure this apartment which is a fire trap. Will not stay in D. C. beyond this summer if conditions do not improve."

"I think the rent situation should have been looked into long before this date. People who were used to comfortable homes come here and have to pay from $35 to $50 for rooms converted into apartments not fit to live in."

"Had family here three months, moved six times. Most places did not allow children."

"It is one year that I am working here and still I am forced to keep my family in Philadelphia on account of the rents. Too high for a decent little place to live in—apartment or house."

"The housing here in Washington is worse than anywhere I have been, and that is from coast to coast. The real estate is far worse than the numbers racket."

". . . A party was moving out the 2d of March, 1935. I was going to rent her place, just two rooms. The rent was $22 a month. The landlady has raised it to $30 a month. (Northeast section)."

"On February 9 I sent my family back to Birmingham simply because we could not live in Washington anywhere like in the style to which we are accustomed on the wages I am making."

"It is suggested that the proper authorities make an inspection with regard to the sanitary conditions of the premises and methods incident to the proper fire prevention."

"I room in Washington, but my family would like to move here. In New York State I pay $20 a month for six-room, all modern house. This house would rent for not less than $60 in D. C."

Army Officer Seeking Reason Hagerstown Missed Big Battle

Col. Landers Asks Aid of Chamber in Study of Meade Telegram.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 5.—Why the greatest battle of the Civil War was not fought on the outskirts of Hagerstown on July 13, 1863, and why General Meade permitted the Army of the Confederate Gen. Lee to slip away and cross the Potomac River into Virginia, is one of the mysteries which Col. H. L. Landers, U. S. Army, a student of that war, is endeavoring to solve.

Col. Landers has asked the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce to assist him after he learned of a telegram sent to President Lincoln by Gen. Meade, commander of the Union Army, on July 12, in which he said he was about to engage in the greatest battle of the war.

Col. Landers for some years was engaged in historical research into the Civil War at Washington prior to 1932 and in continuing his studies has reached the situation which confronted the two armies of Meade and Lee on July 12 and 13 just south of Hagerstown where Lee's army was in a position west of the Marsh Run to receive an attack. Meade had deployed his troops east of Marsh Run with the expectation of attacking on July 13.

Col. Landers is convinced that Meade unwarrantedly delayed the attack until July 14 and on the night of the 13th the greater portion of Lee's army crossed the Potomac. Now Col. Landers is planning to come here to determine the exact line on which the two armies went into position and endeavor to locate breastworks which they are understood to have thrown up in expectation of the battle.

The two armies had met less than two weeks before on the battlefield at Gettysburg.

Towns Advised Of Better Plan On Tax Records

Virginia Auditor Suggests Municipalities Employ Triplicating System.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 5.—In submitting an audit report on the affairs of the town of Kenbridge a few days ago, State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs made several recommendations to that town which he said would be applicable to practically every municipality in Virginia, in regard to improved keeping of their records. The recommendations indicated:

That tripilicate tax tickets, such as are now used by the counties, be used by the towns.

That the town treasurer issue receipts in duplicate for partial payments made by taxpayers; at present the treasurer simply notes the amount of such payment on the tax ticket.

That duplicate receipts be used for water rent and connection payments.

That a record be made of all town automobile tags sold, by name and number of license.

That there be a general receipt for miscellaneous collections such as the sale of cemetery lots.

That a delinquent tax list be prepared as of August 31 each year.

That after the tax books have been written the treasurer should not be allowed to make new tickets without a supplemental assessment order from the commissioner of the revenue.

That a warrant-check should be adopted for all disbursements, instead of the present warrant and check, to save unnecessary work.

Liquor Levy Fraud Trial In 3d Week

Conspiracy Case Likely to Last Month More at Roanoke.

Government Will Call on 100 Additional Witnesses.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 5.—Twenty-three persons accused by the United States of conspiracy to defraud it of internal revenue taxes due on whisky manufactured in Franklin County between September, 1928, and February, 1935, face the third consecutive week of Government fire tomorrow in Federal District Court.

Indications have come from the prosecution that they will require all of this week and next week to complete testimony of more than 100 witnesses yet remaining to be heard. Forty-four testified last week, bringing to 63 the number who have taken the stand to tell of the illicit manufacturing and distribution operations.

If the case reaches the jury now before June 1, there will be occasion for surprise among courtroom observers. The defense is expected to take up more than two weeks in presenting its side. Commonwealth's Attorney Charles Carter Lee, one of the defendants, is expected to use approximately 200 witnesses alone.

After completing its picture of the manufacturing end of the business, the Government is expected to go extensively into the rum-running operations which became fairly familiar to Roanoke residents in the prohibition years.

During the week the Government witnesses continued to pile up evidence against several county officers and several former agents of the law, three of whom are dead.

Leonard L. Fralin, H. J. "Jake" Wright and T. Frank Davis, partners, revealed for the first time the size of operations carried on by some of the major partnerships. Fralin admitted having seven stills running under protection at one time and buying several hundred gallons of liquor from other distillers to meet demands of his trade.

Whitehead, Chisox Rookie, Gives Nats Only 4 Hits to Win, 4-0

Burke Yields All Runs in 2 Frames

Tapped for Four Blows; Fine Relief Pitching Comes Too Late.

Chicago Hurler Allows Only One Rival to Get Past First Base.

By a Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, May 5.—Swinging their bats for little more than exercise, the Nationals took it on their chins again today as they wound up their series with the White Sox. The score against them in this second successive defeat was 4 to 0.

So far as the tallying was concerned, the ball game was over after the first two innings. In that brief span, the White Sox hammered Bob Burke for four hits and as many runs. That made it a day for the lanky left-hander. Thereafter, the Nationals got good pitching from a trio of second-stringers.

Henry Coppola hurled three rounds to yield one hit. Eddie Linke showed the home folks he had a good arm up his right sleeve by chucking two hitless innings. Leon Pettit left-handed through the eight to give up the sixth safety made by the White Sox.

Recruit Shines.

But the Washington brand of pitching, despite its high quality after Burke's departure from the hill was overshadowed by that done by John Whitehead, the rookie sensation of the season. In hurling to his fourth successive victory, Whitehead limited the Nationals to just four safeties. Jack Stone got two of these. The others were made by Joe Kuhel and Cecil Travis. Whitehead walked but one batter.

So effective was the White Sox youngster that only one of the Washington band got by first base. In the fourth Stone managed to reach the third sack. This inning was the only one in which the Nationals had as many as two on the paths at one time. Kuhel singled after Stone had hit safely. But there was no help for this pair.

Strikes Out Only Two.

Whitehead was no strike-out pitcher. He retired only two batters that way. But his control throughout the game was remarkable.

Rarely did he pitch more than two bad ones to any man at the plate. His was a wonderfully smooth performance.

The White Sox lost no time in getting to Burke. Radcliff, leading off in the first inning, drove the ball against the right field stand barrier for a three-bagger. Hayes hoisted to short right, but after Simmons drew a pass, Radcliff tallied as Bonura was thrown out.

The second was a three-run affair for the home crowd. Appling began the parade of the bases with a walk to get home on successive singles by Dykes and Sewell. After Whitehead sacrificed, Burke very kindly presented the White Sox with a score. When Radcliff tapped to the pitcher the latter paid no attention to Dykes tearing toward the plate, but threw for the out at first. Dykes could easily have been retired.

Scores on Single.

Sewell had held second on this foolish play, but a single by Hayes got him to the plate.

In the fourth the Nationals looked as if they would break into the scoring column, but a double play kept them away from the final base. Stone singled and, after Manush's pop, Kuhel rapped for a base to send Johnny to third. Travis, though, rolled to Hayes and the two-way erasure that barely got Cecil at first base ensued.

Washington never had a look-in at any other time.

Derby Loss $5,000, Declares Kearney

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 5.—Tom Kearney, betting commissioner, said last night he had lost $5,000 on the Kentucky Derby.

"I lost about $5,000," Kearney said. "Frank Shannon's book in New York lost, too. The horses that finished first and second were the heaviest played in the winter books and that means we lose money."

Omaha, the winner of the Derby, opened in Kearney's future or "winter" book at 15 to 1, and closed at 4 to 1, when Kearney stopped accepting winter bets last Thursday. Kearney said Omaha was the heaviest played horse in his book, but the odds did not show it, because the odds on Chance Sun and Today were shorter.

Tigers, Cards Best Teams Of Week

Weather Man Was Victor in All but 26 Games; Nats Lost 4 of 5.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Baseball's old enemy, the weather man, was the big winner during the third week of the major league season, but a few teams, notably the Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Cardinals, were able to fatten their averages considerably.

While only 26 games were played in the two major circuits, last year's world series rivals managed to win seven between them. The Tigers, bent on a comeback rang up three straight victories with an unbeatable combination of heavy hitting, fine pitching and perfect fielding. The Cardinals won four games out of five with the celebrated Dizzy Dean chalking up two victories and brother Paul one.

Although they didn't touch the low marks of the week, the Washington Nationals gave a remarkable exhibition of ineffectiveness as they lost four out of five games. Hitting safely 42 times, they scored only 19 runs while allowing their opponents 26.

The week's records of games won and lost, runs, hits, errors, opponents' runs and home runs follow:

Giants and Reds In 10 Inning 2-2 Tie

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Two of the National League's unbeaten pitchers, Hal Schumacher, of the Giants, and Paul Derringer, of the Reds, met today and retired with their laurels undamaged when rain finally ended the encounter with the score tied at 2-2 after the tenth inning.

The entire game was plaed in the rain, but an extra-heavy shower came along to put a stop to the affair after the Reds had knotted the count in the eighth, when Derringer went out for a pinch hitter, and Schumacher had carried on for two more innings. The Giant right-hander preserved his record of never having lost to Cincinnati, but failed to record his twelfth victory.

It was the third drawn battle of the season for the Giants, who twice finisned on even terms with the Phillies in extra-inning encounters.

The Reds scored the first run when Chick Hafey belted a homer in the second inning, but Mel Ott duplicated the effort in the same frame, taking the major league lead with his seventh circuit swat of the year.

Babe Is Held Hitless as 30,000 See Braves Beaten, 7 to 0.

Four Extra Base Blows, Plus 2 Singles, Net 6 Runs in 2d.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 5.—With a wide grin on his face, Dizzy Dean waved his outfielders back to the fence and grooved a fast third strike on Babe Ruth today when they faced each other for the second time in the St. Louis Cardinals' 7-to-0 shut-out over the Boston Braves.

A crowd of 30,000 was stunned into silence as Dizzy passed the Babe in the first, fanned him with four throws in the fourth and made him ground out in dinky fashion on his last trip to the plate in the sixth.

Before making the Babe almost break his back going for his steaming strike-out ball, Dizzy sent one of Ed Brandt's southpaw heaves screaming over the Ruthian head into the left-field stands on his first time at bat in the second, when ten Cards went to the plate and slammed in all but one of their runs.

Four Extra-Basers.

After Brandt retired, Bobby Smith and Fred Frankhouse wheeled into action and kept Frankie Frisch's sluggers under more or less control.

The Braves piled up ten hits against Dean, just as many as he and his mates were able to get off the three Boston hurlers, but none was timely. Randy Moore was the only tribesman to take any kind of liberties with the Dean offerings. He drove two singles through Dizzy and then almost hit the right-field wall for a two-bagger, with Mowry on base in the eighth.

Babe Quits in Seventh.

The Babe, who had two fielding chances, left the game after the seventh inning, when Mowry took over left field.

Veteran Wins His First in Pittsburgh Uniform.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 5.—Guy Bush, released from the baseball hoosegow after serving a suspension for his part in a fight at Chicago, hurled his first victory as a Pittsburgh Pirate today, working through a nine-inning drizzle to defeat the Dodgers, 9 to 2. The victory gave the Bucs the series, two games to one.

Floyd (Arky) Vaughan, whose homer in the ninth gave the Pirates a 1-0 decision yesterday, hit another, his fifth of the season, in the first inning today. An error by Tony Cuccinello led to three unearned runs in the sixth, when Watson Clark was knocked out. In all the Pirates obtained 11 blows off three Brooklyn pitchers, while Bush allowed only eight.

Experts See Omaha Winning Preakness

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

CHILLICOTHE, Ohio, May 5.—With the aid of a determined locomotive, your turf correspondent is now setting the pace for the mighty Omaha, yesterday's Kentucky Derby winner who now is speeding toward ancient Pilmico, where on Saturday he will attempt to dig his name deeper in turf history in the forty-fourt Preakness. But just as he sped through the cold rain at Churchill Downs yesterday to pass Plat Eye, Boxthorn, St. Bernard and the others, the Eastern horse with the Western name will swish by me at Cincinnati, now looming in the haze.

In a stable car attached to a special train which left Louisville shortly after noon today, the blazed faced bullet of the Belair barn is making the hop between the two turf classics. Only three horses—Gallant Fox, Omaha's daddy, Sir Barton and Burgoo King—have been successful in both events. In a stall that is hip deep with straw, Omaha stands with his precious legs encased in cotton and bandage. Tomorrow he will be unloaded at the Baltimore track.

See Omaha Repeating.

Experts are virtually unanimous in predicting that the rather clumsy looking but speedy running Omaha will repeat his victory in Maryland this week-end. That Omaha was able to make his move early in the Derby, in contrast to his late spurts in previous races, makes of no consequence the fact that the Preakness is a sixteenth of a mile shorter.

Omaha's chances in the Preakness should be enchanced by the fact that the field probably will be smaller. Several owners of horses that trailed the Belair entry yesterday have indicated that they will not start their charges at Pimlico. However, the Derby winner will meet several horses that were not named for the Churchill Downs race.

Black Helen, not nominated by Col. Bradley for the Derby but a speedster of the first flight, is in the group. St. Moritz, owned, trained and to be ridden by Jockey Whitey Abel; Rosemont, the son of The Porter that many rate the best 1934 juvenile; Fire Thorn, Walter M. Jefford's stake winner last year, and Demonstration, which came from the West Coast to impress with a Maryland victory, are among the probable new opponents for Omaha.

Strictly Derby Horse.

Omaha is what the horsemen term "strictly a Derby horse." His entire life to Derby Day was programmed with the Kentucky classic as his objective, it was recalled today, and too late for betting purposes.

Trainer "Sonny Jim" Fitzsimmons said before Omaha set a hoof on a track, "pay no attention to any race this colt runs befo rethe Derby." Foaled in Kentucky, Omaha spent his yearling days in Maryland and raced only in New York last year.

Owner William Woodward, chairman of the jockey club and banker, gave the name to the colt due to his beefy appearance. Woodward city. "Chicago" had been used by sought the name of a meat-packing another horse and "Kansas City" did not strike the owner's fancy. He finally selected Omaha and the chamber of commerce of that city probably is building a monument to the horse now.

Alibi for Nellie Flag.

Of the horses that chased Omaha to the wire yesterday, Nellie Flag is the only one that can be alibied. Her only chance lay in getting to the front during the nrst stages of the race. Yesterday she was twice bothered, first by Plat Eye at the start and again when trying to make a move on the clubhouse turn. She may or may not have threatened Omaha had she had clear sailing, but her courageous finish in the Derby stretch will allow her to retain many backers when she marches to the post on Saturday in the Preakness.

C. V. Whitney's Today might have failed in the Derby, but the colt's name furnished plenty of ammunition for the gag artists. That's why I didn't begin this story like this: "Having left Today yesterday, Omaha left today tobe at Pimlico tmorrow."

First Crew Upset Recorded by Penn

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5.—Credit Pennsylvania's varsity oarsmen with the first upset of the Eastern sprint rowing season.

The best crew Rusty Callow has developed at Philadelphia gave Yale and Columbia a beating on the Schuylkill yesterday and chalked up Penn's first victory in the nine-year history of the Blackwell Cup Regetta.

The Quakers were the lightest crew in the race, but, with Lloyd Saxton setting the beat, they developed the speed and power to stop Yale's highly touted eight by almost a length with Columbia a distant third. They rowed into the lead at the outset, held it through the early stages of the race and then successfully fought off Yale's closing bid. The time for the Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths was 6:21. Yale was clocked in 6:24 and Columbia in 6:34.

Horses, Fans, Fans, Horses —That's the Derby Hangover

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 5.—An emotional hangover from the Kentucky Derby, when set down on paper, looks something like when lying in a pullman berth at the crack of dawn, with one's eyelids pulled half over one's eyes so that there is a half haze, half light on the pictures flashing across the screen of the mind.

Horses, horses, people, people, people standing in lines, horses parading in line, people all over in knots and bunches, horses coming down the stretch in knots and bunches. Men in colored silks sitting on horses, women in colored silks betting on horses, the ground of the clubhouse gardens tasselated with torn mutuel tickets like colored tiles in an old Roman Vallee standing down there under the odds board. It is . . . Brrrrrr. Life is just another mint julep. Ah, there, colonel, how are you this fine rainy afternoon? Come on, you Omaha.

How is it possible for a man to have something like 18 tickets on the Derby and still not get a horse in the money? Hello, look out the window. It's spring in the Alleghenies. The dogwood is out.

Note for the Reds—All the real blueblood society and Jockey Club boxes at the Derby were out in the open on the lawn, down in front of the clubhouse grandstand. Us middle-classers were upstairs in the covered section and the peasants and serfs had a lovely time under the protecting roof of the grand-

Old Line Faces Chance to Tie For Lead

To Meet Virginia, W. & L. This Week in Crucial Conference Tilts.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., May 5.—After trampling Duke down into third position and taking second place for their own, Maryland's Old Liners today mapped out an ambitious week's program which they hoped would give them a first place tie with Washington and Lee's Southern Conference baseball leaders.

Maryland struck only one blow during the past week, but it was a decisive wallop that smacked Duke downward a peg under the sting of a 12-to-4 trimming.

Could Take Lead.

If the Old Liners can take Virginia's rejuvenated Cavaliers into camp at College Park as they're favored to do Tuesday and then whip Washington and Lee Friday they'll have a place beside the Generals in the driver's seat.

Washington and Lee, however, let no grass grow under its feet during the week, winning three victories in a row to run the Generals' string of consecutive league triumphs without defeats to seven. The Generals had to work hard to protect their perfect score, nosing out Virginia, 7 to 5, and whipping V. P. I., 4 to 2 Friday and 4 to 1 yesterday in 10 innings.

Despite their unbroken string of conference victories and the fact they gave the Old Liners their only league defeat earlier in the season, the Generals will rate no better than even money when they invade College Park Friday. Since they took their early season whipping from Washington and Lee, the Old Liners have been traveling at a furious pace, beating Virginia Tech, 10 to 5; V. M. I., 18 to 4; V. P. I., 17 to 8, and Duke, 12 to 4.

Old Liners Face Virginia.

Maryland will have to give first attention to the Virginia nine that whipped North Carolina yesterday, 4 to 0, behind the four-hit pitching of the veteran Orlin Rogers. In pitching the Cavaliers to their first baseball victory over the Tar Heels in two years, Rogers was in complete command of the situation. His teammates fielded faultlessly and in addition raked Webster for nine hits, four of them for extra bases.

North Carolina had whipped Virginia the previous day, 5 to 3, but lost to North Carolina State, 3 to 2, Thursday. State will meet Duke at Raleigh Wednesday and will play North Carolina at Raleigh the following day.

Virginia Tech and Virginia Military will clash at Lexington Friday and Saturday, while Duke has a Saturday game carded with North Carolina at Durham.

Princeton, Chicago Sign Gridiron Pact

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 5.—Princeton and Chicago, which played one of the classics of Midwestern football history in 1922, will renew gridiron warfare in 1937 and 1938, it was announced today.

The first game of the home-and-home series will be played on Stagg Field October 16, 1937. They meet at Princeton October 15, 1938.

Coach H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, of Princeton, was one of Chicago's outstanding performers in the first meeting, in 1921, which the Maroons won, 9 to 0, at Princeton. In 1922, Princeton staged one of the wildest of rallies to win, 21 to 18.

Chevy Chase Upsets Foe In Golf

Defeats Indian Spring; Kenwood Is Winner Over Woodmont.

By Dave Herman.

CHEVY CHASE toppled the favorite, Indian Spring, yesterday at the Four Corners course, 10 to 8, and Kenwood crushed Woodmont, 7½ to 1½, at Kenwood, in the Maryland State Golf Association team championship matches.

The stage thus is set for a battle next Sunday between Chevy Chase and Kenwood for the District title, and the winner of this match will engage the winner of the Baltimore section for the Maryland championship.

Playing in top form, Dick Lunn, former District champion, and Johnny Brawner, the frail fellow who lost to Ross Somerville in the 1932 National Amateur at Five Farms, took 3 points from Louis Fuchs and Earl McAleer in the feature match at Indian Spring. Roger Peacock was scheduled to play the No. 1 position, but was indisposed, and his absence crimped the hopes of the one-time Maryland team champions.

Shoot Best Ball of 69.

Kenwood had little trouble defeating Woodmont. Russ Hollebaugh, Kenwood's long-driving champion, and his partner, Maury Fitzgerald, took 2½ points from Howard Nordlinger and Milton Harris, with Hollenbaugh doing a 75 and Fitzgerald a 76. The Kenwood pair had a best ball of 69.

Bernard Dennell featured the scoring at Kenwood, shooting a 72 and holing out a 125-yard mashie niblick shot for an eagle deuce on the third. It was on the same hole that Hollenbaugh reached the green in one blow, rimming the cup for his eagle. Dennell and Dunn had a best ball of 68, taking 3 points from Fulton Brylawski and Lester Olian.

Results:

Kenwood (7½) vs. Woodmont (1½).

Ballston Upsets Middleburg as N. Virginia Loop Season Opens

'34 Champs Blanked by Lem Owen

Fairfax Is Victor With Manassas, Marshall and Arlington.

RUNNING the gauntlet of baseball thrills and emotions, with stirring pitching duels, last-minute game-saving rallies, sensational catches and the fiery competitive actions of player and rotter alike, the Northern Virginia League, now entering its second season under the auspices of The Washington Post Sandlot Baseball Association, opened its new campaign yesterday with games in five of the Virginia suburban towns.

In the day's most stunning surprise, a determined Ballston team traveled to Middleburg and plastered an 11-0 beating on the 1934 Virginia League champions. Fairfax Station scored over the newly entered Vienna A. C., 8 to 2, in another spectacular triumph. Manassas put over two runs in a last-inning rally to defeat Falls Church, 5 to 3, on the Manassas field; Arlington won impressively over the strong Berndon outfit, 6 to 4, and Marshall defeated the Aldie nine, 6 to 2, in the initial appearance of these teams in Northern Virginia League competition.

The Millwood-Purcellville contest was called off because of wet grounds.

Lem Owen Is Star.

The story of Ballston's triumph is the comeback of the veteran Lem Owen, who pitched one of the finest games of his lengthy baseball career against Middleburg. Lem was the "mystery" pitcher, whose sturdy right arm has stood the gaff of almost 20 years' service, whose identity the Ballston manager had so zealously guarded during the past week. His appearance on the mound against Middleburg was a distinct surprise to everybody, and particularly to the Middleburg sluggers, who were completely baffled. The determination of Ballston to conquer its haughty rival is reflected in the six-run scoring assault with which it surprised Pitcher Rhodney Furr in the first inning.

Johnny Mahoney, on the mound for Fairfax Station, was the hero of his team's triumph over Vienna. For six innings young Manhoney held Vienna hitless, while his teammates, led by Gordon Riggles, hammered Pitcher Swan for a trio of runs in the early rounds.

A confident Manassas nine was extended to the limit to gain the decision in its battle with Falls Church, but managed to squeeze over the deciding scores in the eighth on successive hits by Godfrey, Lynn, Floyd Vetter and Brenner.

Moffett Whiffs 14.

Lay Moffett turned in another sparkling pitching effort for Marshall to down the Aldie A. C. in a hard-fought contest. Moffett garnered strike-out laurels for the day by fanning 14 Aldie batters.

Despite Moffett's hurling Marshall was forced to come from behind to win the game in the seventh, when a pair of lusty triples by Ball and O'Bannon, followed by singles by Fairfax Lunceford and Carl Dunn produced 5 runs and enabled Moffett to coast to victory.

Earl McPherson chalked up his thirteenth consecutive victory in North Virginia League competition yesterday, when he pitched Arlington to a triumph over Herndon. McPherson granted only six hits and struck out eight.

Bokar, Rajah Victorious in Slugfests

Bonday Is Defeated, 18-11; Encore Is Trounced by 11-6 Score.

BASE hits were a dime a dozen as Bokar routed Bonday, 18 to 11, and Rajah belted Encore, 11 to 6, in a pair of slugfests in the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. League yesterday on the Ellipse. By virtue of their victories both Bokar and Rajah remain undefeated in the race for Post Association title in this loop.

Greeting Abbott with a barrage of hits, the Bonday batsmen piled up an 8-run lead in the first two innings, but were held in check the rest of the game by the fine hurling of relief pitcher Tack Ensor. The Bonday advantage was short-lived, however, as the Bokar sluggers, led by McElroy, Wells, Hunt and Patty Byrne, soon found their batting eyes and staged slugging riots in the third, fifth, seventh and eight innings to amass a total of 18 runs. Wells and McElroy clouted home runs.

Take 7-Run Lead.

Some fine pitching by McIntosh and timely hitting by his teammates, Moore, Rhyne and Merrelo, were the chief factors in Raja's triumph over Encore. Behind a comfortable 7-run lead, established in the early innings, McIntosh coasted along, aided no little by the nice support of the Rajah infield. Encore made its only threat in the fifth, when Sherburn, Scarlotta, Wallace and Jones connected for successive singles to produce four tallies.

Washington Team Ousted From First Place.

The Oriole Archers of Baltimore took first place in the men's division from the Potomac Archers of Washington in the annual spring tournament held on the polo field at Potomac Park yesterday.

The double American round was won by William Skinner, of Baltimore, and second place went to Dr. Robert P. Elmer, of Philadelphia, former national champion. Third place was won by N. S. Williams, of Washington.

The clout shoot was won by William Skinner with a score of 186; H. S. Callowhill, of Baltimore, was second with a score of 182, and Dr. E. P. Clark, of the Potomac Archers, was third with a score of 180.

In the women's division, Mrs. L. A. Taylor, of Washington, was first; Mrs. Miller, Baltimore, second, and Mrs. E. Trager, Baltimore, third.

Hecht Downed By Lansburgh Nine, 5-3

Store Officials See Game; Kann's Team Downs Palais Royal.

LANSBURGH & BRO., its baseball fortunes now in the ascendency, gave notice of its Post Association pennant aspirations in the Department Store League by its brilliant 5-3 victory over the fast Hecht Co. team on the Ellipse diamond yesterday.

Witnessed by a group of store officials, including Charles D. Goldsmith, H. G. Malone, Sol Lansburgh, Adolph Weyl and G. Shortt, the keen pitching duel between Pitchers Vance and Augie Tamagni forced into the background the other league attraction, which saw S. Kann Sons & Co. beat Palais Royal, 12 to 3.

Fine Performance.

Vance turned in a masterful performance, but he must rightfully share honors with all his teammates, who backed up his pitches in flawless fashion. Staked to a two-run lead in the opening inning by the hitting of Fillah and America, Vance hurled shut-out ball for six innings.

By this time the combination of Fillah and America had again conspired to ruin the day for the Hechtmen. Again this duo came through with successive hits to cap another three-run scoring rally in the sixth.

Though defeated, the Hecht team put up a fine battle. Tamagni hurled well enough to win nine out of ten games. The Hechtmen were no slouches at the bat, either, and outhit their rivals, 10 to 7.

Rally Is Checked.

In the last inning Norford, Tamagni and Barrett instituted a batting attack against Vance in a belated rally, but Vance settled down and added a few more to his list of ten strike-out victims.

With Bernard, Thomas, Riston and Quigley taking conspicuous roles, Kann's lost no time in piling up a commanding four-run lead in its game with Palais Royal.

This was sufficient for Pitcher Jack Wallach, but the Kannsmen continued their scoring march throughout, stepping across the plate one or more times in every inning.

Front Royal Shuts Out Winchester Nine, 5 to 0

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., May 5. — The Front Royal All-Stars kept their season record clean by shutting out the Winchester Park Association nine here this afternoon, 5 to 0. Bobby Cassell scattered the visitors' five hits over as many innings and was seldom in danger.

Left Jewett, former AA-Star hurler but now manager of the Winchester club, also pitched well with the exception of two innings. Despite the cold weather, a large crowd saw the game.

Omaha and Eight Other Derby Horses Entrain for Pimlico

Gallant Fox Feats Seen Periled

Jockey Saunders Also Will Be Up on Colt in Preakness.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, May 5.—Proudly arching his aristocratic neck, the dapper colt Omaha took the same trail Eastward today as his great daddy, Gallant Fox, did five years ago after winning the Kentucky Derby.

Nearly 50,000 saw Omaha win the sixty-first running of the Derby in the cold, drizzling rain at Churchill Downs late yesterday. Three admiring fans who went to the park in the rain this morning to see the victor were rewarded with a friendly nod from the handsome, blaze-faced chestnut colt.

After Omaha's smashing triumph by 1¼ lengths in the Kentucky classic, owner William M. Woodward, of New York, announced that the colt would be run in the Preakness at Pimlico next Saturday. Omaha's sire followed up his Derby victory in 1930 by winning the Preakness.

Others Also Entrain.

Eight other Eastern-owned thoroughbreds that ran in the Derby entrained for Pimlico, Md., with Omaha. They were Mrs. W. S. Kilmer's Sun Fairplay, Mrs. W. M. Jeffords' Commonwealth. Brandon Stable's Tutticurio. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Plat Eye. C. V. Whitney's Today, and Hal Price Headley's Whopper. Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Psychic Bid and J. H. Louchheim's Morpluck.

Riding first-class with Omaha was his stablemate, Gallant Prince, also a son of Gallant Fox. Gallant Prince was nominated for the Derby but was not a starter.

Sun Fairplay's mascot was a stern-faced Great Dane. Omaha's attendants said he required no mascot. The thoroughbreds are due to reach Pimlico tomorrow morning.

In Pleasant Mood.

Omaha was in a pleasant mood when he boarded his special car and walked into a stall well bedded with straw. He nipped at bales of hay and made a playful pass at the shoulder of Thomas Driscoll, assistant trainer in charge of the car.

Willie (Smoky) Saunders, who piloted Omaha in the Derby, left on another train for New York, where he will ride at Jamaica this week. He will have the mount on Omaha in the Preakness at Pimlico.

Trainer "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, who saddled both Derby winners for Woodward, said present plans call for Omaha to be entered in the major stake races on Eastern fronts and in the Middle West this year.

Nellie Flag Remains.

The filly, Nellie Flag, which finished fourth in the Derby, remained at the Downs and probably will appear in other races during the spring meeting which closes here May 18.

A. B. Hancock, on whose Bluegrass farm in central Kentucky Omaha was foaled, predicted further conquests for Omaha.

"He's going to do all his daddy did and maybe a little bit more," said Hancock, who witnessed Omaha's Derby triumph.

Preakness 'Prep' Is Pimlico Feature

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pimlico Race Track, Md., May 5. A "prep" race for Saturday's Preakness renewal will feature tomorrow's Pimlico card.

Entries in this mile and a sixteenth contest include Walter M. Jeffords' Firethorn, E. R. Bradley's Bloodroot, Breckinridge Long's Legume, F. M. Alger, jr's., Polar Flight, and A. G. Vanderbilt's Cold Shoulder. The largest turnout in many years is expected for the Preakness. Matthias L. Daiger, secretary of the Maryland Jockey Club, announced today all reservations had been taken.

The race, $25,000 added, probably will be worth in the neighborhood of $27,000 to the winner. Ten starters will place its first place value at $26,850. Second place takes $3,500, third $1,500 and fourth $500.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: En route to Pimlico, May 5.

I wouldn't knock the Kentucky National Guard if the Kentucky National Guard hadn't done some knocking on its own at the Derby scene yesterday. The National Guardsmen were assigned to aid the Louisville police force in keeping order along the track and around the official stand. Like the police, the guardsmen were given sticks, billies or persuaders with which to emphasize their orders. The only difference was that the police asked questions and then swung a club, while the National Guard boys swung a club and then asked questions.

At times the police got the right answer and didn't have to swing, but the guards just let the matter, or the victim, drop. At some stages it looked like batting practice at Griffith Stadium. I saw several line drives behind left ears and a number of triples to the forehead that, in manner delivered, smacked of hill-billy tactics. I might have forgiven these young men who apparently know little of handling crowds, had they to a man snapped to attention when the Star-Spangled Banner" was played. Here and there a scattered few came to rigid salute, but most of those within sight of the press box did not change their positions. They hung over the rails or leaned against posts, although some took their hats off instead of saluting. Gov. Laffoon might do a lot better if he gave more thought to his privates and less to his Kentucky colonels. BILL.

PIMLICO SELECTIONS.
By Clocker Mike.

First race—Tody Con flashed plenty of speed last time and can win by running back to that race. Dalmatia may not get it, but if she does she'll be troublesome. Lone Miss appears the best of the others.

Second race—Capstan has schooled well and appears to be the best of a mighty bad lot of jumpers. White Lightning is the logical contender. Flying Feathers has an outside chance to upset things.

Third race—Hereward has all the speed of this field and should get home safely. O'Neill is an improved horse and might be troublesome. Smear is highly regarded by the clockers and figures very closely.

Fourth race—Nouveau Riche, from the lucky Vanderbilt stable, showed enough in her debut to look like the best hazard on today's card. She will have Hiatus to beat. Zuni is a very fast worker.

Fifth race—Four Spot drops into a soft spot here and should make no mistakes. Cohort Miss, a powerful finisher, looks like the chief threat. Spixie has plenty of early speed and must be overhauled.

Sixth race—Demonstration is greatly improved and should knock off these smart 3-year-olds. Blood Root has all the early speed of the field and is very fit. Firthorn is the class of the race, but may be a little short.

Seventh race—Someone Else can do better than she showed last time and should do it here. John Tio is a hot paddock tip and might surprise. Flag Raising finished like a streak of lightning last time.

Eighth race—Gloritone is the class of this lowly bunch of claiming platers and looks like a lock. Heiress won cleverly last time. Sun Spear has been paddock tip for several starts. Watch out!

Hunter, Saddle Aces to Vie In Show

17 Mounts to Compete for Honors in 2 Classes at Meet Friday.

THE two classes to be held at the National Capital Horse Show to determine Washington's hunter and saddle champions have attracted the strongest field of horses ever to take part in those contests. Both competitions are listed for Friday, the second day of the three-day meeting at Bradley Farms.

An even dozen mounts, representing the cream of the local stables, will struggle for the two trophies at stake in the hunter class and five of the best gaited horses are to vie for the saddle title.

Drill, a thoroughbred colt by Man o' War stock, and Stand Off, clean-blooded offspring of Sea Rip-Repartee breeding, are two juveniles who figure to be well up in the running in the hunter class this year. Both youngsters have been consistent winners since they made their debut last summer.

Won at Pinehurst.

W. Carlton Eacho, owner of the 4-year-old Drill, won the Pinehurst N. C., horse show championship with his brown star last month and captured the blue ribbon in the only two classes in which he showed the colt at the Charleston S. C., show. Stand Off, a 3-year-old, is owned by Fenton Fadeley.

Mezzo, Louis Leeth's crack steeplechaser, has been purchased by Robert Montgomery and converted into a show-ring performer and will make her debut in her new role at the National Capital's local hunter class. Mezzo is a 9-year-old thoroughbred by Meridian out of The Busy Body. Montgomery also will show Ne Hi in the same competition.

Others Are Entered.

Miss Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, which finished fourth in the class last year and is the only ribbon winner re-entered in this particular competition; U. S. Randall's Governor; Howard W. Kacy's Dermot, Hubbert D. Quinter's Sonny Boy, Miss Evelyn Walker's Salome and Hambone, Lieut. W. G. Wyman's Easter Morn and Capt. Marion Carson's Wise are the other entries.

Foremost among the entries for the local saddle class is Jack Lightning, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon G. Owens' entry, who won the blue ribbon in the same division in 1934.

Consistent Winners.

Opposing the Owens' mount will be Gulf Breeze, shown by Miss Marjorie McLeod; Mrs. Catherine Clarke's Bob-o-Link, Miss Evelyn Walker's Salome, and Frank W. Burrows' Happy Time, another consistent ribbon winner.

The DeGraw Trophy and an additional silver trophy, offered by the National Capital Horse Show Association, will go to the champion local hunter, while the owner of the local saddle horse championship will receive a sterling silver sandwich tray placed in competition by Galt Brothers.

Fifty-five classes comprise the program for the three-day meeting and the show will open at 10 a. m. Thursday. Friday and Saturday classes also are to open at that hour.

Join the (Shoeless) Marines! See the World (Barefooted)

Army and Navy in Heaven's Scenes to Find Unshod Devil Dogs.

More than 3,500 United States Marine Corps reservists have turned "thumbs down" on the old Negro spiritual, "All God's Chillun Got Shoes."

The reason is that the House of Representatives, in passing the naval appropriations bill, not only failed to provide shoes and socks for the marines, but also overcoats and raincoats.

On the other hand, 11,000 Navy and 148,000 Army reservists were allotted shoes, socks, overcoats, raincoats and other personal equipment which was, for some mysterious reason, withheld from the marines.

The present clothing allowance for the marine reserves amounts to $16 for the year, while the allowance for naval reserves is $50 and for the Army and National Guardsmen $48 for each man.

The clothing allowance for the marines at present consists of only one belt, one pair of leggings and a hat, two cotton shirts and two pairs of trousers.

That for the naval reserves, in addition to the marine clothing allotment, includes a wool coat, two pairs of shoes, two pairs of socks, gloves, overcoat and raincoat. The Army allotment is about the same.

The marines, however, are hopeful that the Senate Appropriations Committee, which will consider the bill within the next two days, will adjust the discrimination and take the marines off a tatterdemalion basis.

Wine Here 'Lousy,' Says De Rothschild

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5. — Baron Philippe de Rothschild, a connoisseur of fine wines, fast automobiles and deluxe theaters, has been in New York four days studying the stage, having a good time—and drinking wine.

The baron, a member of the sixth generation of the famous house of Rothschild, thinks the wines are terrible.

"Lousy!" he exclaimed when asked his opinion. "Disgusting!"

This, he explained, included the French wines, too.

"People fall for cheap stuff nowadays," he said.

He confessed he missed the speakeasies which he visited the last time he was in New York.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

Herr Hitler Pleads for Peace.

"We do not wish war," declared Der Fuehrer. "Just as we have restored peace and order among our own people, so do we wish peace and happiness in the rest of the world."

(Editor's note: The speaker's words were temporarily drowned out at this point as a long line of army tanks, constituting an advance showing of the 1936 models, swept by.)

"No sensible leader wishes armed conflict," came his words again. "The lessons of the world blood bath of 1914-1918 are sufficient to turn our thoughts from any such prospect. We seek nothing but brotherly love. . . ."

"The goal of the German nation is peace, perfect peace!" thundered the Reichsfuehrer.

(The speaker stopped and staggered back a few feet at a tremendous explosion which turned out to have come from a test of a new long-range cannon said to be capable of finding a target 100 miles away.)

"We repudiate the Versailles treaty, yes," he continued after a moment, "but not as a gesture of belligerency. No, a thousand times no! We did it because the very provisions o fthe treaty engendered hate and bitterness instead of friendliness and love."

(At this point he was obliged to stop talking, due to the sudden passage of a fleet of 200 of the nation's super bombing planes, the roar of the mighty motors and the cheers of the vast crowd making it impossible for him to be heard.)

"What grieves the German people more than anything else today?" he demanded, once the planes had passed. "It is the thought that some nations do not trust us and suspect we are anticipating, even planning another war. Such suspicion is offensive to the German mind. We desire nothing except tranquil lives and happy firesides . . . ."

"You'll have to finish this speech at once," whispered an official.

"Why?" asked Der Fuehrer.

"You have an appointment at the submarine base to inspect that super fleet of mystery U-boats!"

"Peace! Peace! Let us have peace!" cried Der Fuehrer as he leaped into an armored car.

Tydings Moves To Slash Cost Of Government

Confine Outlays to Income, Plan of Maryland Senator.

By Robert C. Albright.

Alarmed at the mounting public debt, now approaching a $30,000,000,000 peak, conservative Democrats in the Senate have revived their "balance the budget" war cry, and this time plan to do something about it.

Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, member of the independent bloc which has vainly striven to shut off New Deal expenditures, today will introduce in the Senate a resolution to confine outlays strictly to incoming revenue.

The measure will be introduced without Administration blessings, but is expected to muster the strong support of independent Democrats of the Carter Glass School, as well as Republicans across the aisle who have been hammering away at increased spending.

"Automatic Balance."

Senator Tydings seeks through this resolution to place a "ceiling" on the public debt and require what he calls "an automatic balancing of the budget."

Briefly, his plan calls on the President to submit an itemized account of revenues estimated to be received during the coming year at the outset of every session of Congress.

Accompanying the estimates would be a single budget, in which estimated revenues would be allocated in detail to the various departments and branches of the Government. The budget total would be binding, in the sense that Congress would have to reduce the amount allocated one department in order to increase appropriations for another.

Prior Legislation.

Senator Tydings would give this budgetary legislation priority over all other matters before Congress. No other legislation could pass both houses until the budget had been approved by the Congress.

A flexible provision in the resolution would permit Congress to make additional appropriations, but only after new taxes have been provided to raise the money. If Congress desired to borrow money for increased outlays, it would be required to provide for taxes necessary to liquidate the loan over a 15-year period.

To allow for war emergencies, the resolution would make these requirements inoperative in wartime, and for one year after the close of the war.

"If the resolution passes Congress and is signed by the President, the Federal budget will automatically be kept in balance at all times," Senator Tydings said last night.

Would Provide Source.

"My resolution closes up the holes in the budget law under which Congress now functions and which permits Congress to appropriate large sums of money without providing where the money is to come from."

Long an opponent of promiscuous Federal spending, Senator Tydings joined a conservative group of Democratic independents in a futile effort to cut the $4,880,000,000 works appropriations. He is expected to draw the nucleus of his support for his budget-balancing resolution from those who worked with him in that fight.
